

DO NICARAGUANS ROUTED BY U. S. MARINES AIDED BY AIR BOMBERS

Sancho's Rebels, Attacking 39 Americans and 47 of Constabulary, Suffer Heavy Casualties.

DEFENDERS LOSE ONE KILLED, ONE INJURED

About Flyers Carry News of Detachment's Plight in Ocotul and Planes Speed to Relief.

By Associated Press. MANAGUA, Nicaragua, July 18.—Thirty-nine United States Marines and 47 members of the Nicaraguan Constabulary, aided by bombing planes, defeated an attack on Ocotul, 110 miles from Managua, by the rebel Gen. Sancho leading a force of 400 men, sending a detachment of machine gunners.

The battle began on Friday and lasted for 17 hours. Various estimates of casualties were made, one report stating that Sancho's army of 400 rebels were killed.

Bombing planes were sent from Managua, 110 miles away, by Brigadier-General Logan Feland of the Marines when he heard the Marines were greatly outnumbered. One Marine, Michael A. Obelack, of Bouleite, Pa., was killed. He was buried at Ocotul.

Another Marine, Charles Sidney Garrison, of West Street, Asheville, N. C., was shot through the face and shoulder, but has a chance to recover. One member of the Constabulary, which was under command of Lieut. Grover Darnell, was seriously wounded.

Liberal Leader in Flight. Gen. Sancho did not get into thick of the fighting, directing forces from a safe distance, reports said he was fleeing northwest with a few followers.

Among the rebel dead is Gen. Sancho's right hand man, Gen. Feland commanded Gen. G. Hatfield and Maj. E. Row, commander of the bombing planes. The bombing planes flew over Ocotul through a terrific storm, their arrival turned the tide of the battle.

Gen. Feland has given orders to his bombing squadron to destroy any concentration of Sancho's forces.

It is stated in Government quarters that Gen. Sancho, a Liberal leader, who has been occupying American mines at San Fernando, recently refused to surrender.

Sancho called on to do so by Maj. Hatfield, gathered a strong force, belittling the Marines and Constabulary, telling his followers there would be no difficulty in overcoming Ocotul.

The prevailing belief was that Sancho would never attack the Marines, but the report is that Sancho advised him of the small number of Marines and Constabulary.

Boasting that he would "drink the blood," Sancho and his followers began the attack Friday morning.

Marines Refuse Truce. After the fighting had been in progress for several hours, Gen. Hatfield sent a messenger to Maj. Hatfield requesting a 60-minute truce. Maj. Hatfield replied that a truce would last only so long as the flag of the white flag was in sight.

The Americans were greatly outnumbered, as Ocotul is a rebel center, many sympathizers having arms and ammunition hidden in their homes. When the fighting began, more than 100 residents of the town joined Gen. Sancho, and there were many snipers.

VIENNA'S WALTZ DREAM IS A NIGHTMARE

Official forecast for St. Louis and vicinity: Fair tonight and tomorrow; not much change in temperature. Missouri: Generally fair tonight and tomorrow; slightly cooler along Lake Michigan tomorrow. Sunsets, 7:24; sunrise (tomorrow), 4:50. Relative humidity at noon 42.

General Weather Conditions. On Saturday and Sunday night rain fell over most of the country east of the Plain States. The rain was rather local in character; some localities had none at all, others had a heavy fall, and still others had a very light sprinkle. In the Southwestern Missouri there were rains of about 2 inches. In the last 24 hours fair weather has prevailed in the Missouri and Mississippi valleys. The weather is still warm but the temperatures are abnormally high only in the Gulf and Atlantic Coast States.

MAN KIDNAPED IN AUTO AND ROBBED OF $1000

East St. Louis Mayor's Company Loses in Daylight Street Holdup There.

Two armed men took possession of the sedan in which Mayor Logan Feland was traveling on the morning of July 17, robbing him of a canvas bag containing $1000 in cash and $5000 in checks, and drove away with the automobile.

Abandoning their own machine, which later proved to have been stolen, the two men jumped on the running board of Oster's machine as he passed a boulevard sign at Eighteenth street and Missouri avenue. They made him face downward in the rear seat while one of the men took the steering wheel. One of the bandits struck Oster over the shoulder with a revolver because he was too slow in complying with their orders.

In an alley between College and Ohio avenues, near Thirtieth street, ten blocks from where he had been stopped, Oster was ordered to leave the automobile and warned that if he attempted to identify the robbers he would be killed.

Mayor Doyle of East St. Louis is head of the ice cream company, whose plant is located at Twenty-second street and Ridge avenue. In an attempted robbery of the plant July 6, 1925, by five bandits, Daniel Hannefflin, the night watchman, was shot to death. In the past four years, two other attempts have been made to rob the company, one of which proved successful.

The automobile left behind by the bandits today was identified as one stolen from Charles La Croix of 1512 Illinois avenue at Eighth street and St. Louis avenue July 8.

WHOLESALE PRICES DECLINE

June Market Much Lower Than Year Ago, U. S. Reports.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The general level of wholesale prices in June was slightly lower than May figures and substantially lower than those of June, 1926. The figure representing the index of all wholesale prices during last month was 142.7 while for May it was 144.1, and for June, 1926, it was 152.3.

Food, building materials, house furnishings and drugs were among the groups accounting for the decline. There were increases in the general prices of farm products, fuels, metals, and miscellaneous commodities.

Stanton W. Stryker, Portland, Ore., Dentist, Victim of Accident on a Glacier Near Summit.

By the Associated Press. PORTLAND, Ore., July 18.—Dr. Stanton W. Stryker, Portland dentist, was killed, and eight other members of a party of Mazamas, mountain climbing organization, were injured, some seriously, when they plunged into a crevasse yesterday near the summit of Mount Hood.

The accident occurred on a glacier near Horseshoe Rock on the north side of the mountain. The alpenstock of one of the nine victims slipped as they were waiting for steps to be cut in a steep ice slope by advance members of a party which had numbered 103 when it left Cloudeau, In. In a moment the nine climbers, roped together, slid over the frozen incline 300 yards and plunged into an open crevasse.

Other members of the party hurried to the rescue. They found the nine had fallen into soft snow 40 feet below the rim of the crevasse. Dr. Stryker's alpenstock had penetrated his left side and he died two hours later.

FREED OF CHARGE OF SELLING FRUIT ON SUNDAY

Two Defendants Discharged by Police Judge, Six Other Cases Are Continued.

Two operators of a fruit and vegetable store, arrested yesterday, when enforcement of the Sunday closing law for groceries, butcher shops and delicatessen shops began with the arrest of the alleged violators, were discharged today by City Judge Rosecan. Six other cases were put over to Aug. 15 by City Judge Beck. Assistant City Counselor Alvin Hackman gave notice of an appeal from Judge Rosecan's decision.

The two defendants in the first cases to be heard were Andrew and Anthony Sansone, who run a fruit and vegetable store at 6064 Delmar boulevard. They contended the ordinance does not affect them because it specifies only grocery stores, butcher shops and delicatessen.

A restraining order against enforcement recently was dissolved by the Missouri Supreme Court. The ordinance requires bakeries to be closed after 9 a. m. Sunday, and allows other food shops to be open on Sundays only between 2 p. m. and 6 p. m. for the sale of cooked articles and other necessities.

Violations are punishable by fines ranging from $100 to $200. Certain storekeepers are opposing the law, others favor it.

TRAIN HITS AUTO, KILLS 2 MEN THOUGHT TO BE ST. LOUISANS

Car Struck at Crossing Near Kalamazoo, Mich., Bore Missouri License Tag.

By the Associated Press. KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 18.—Two men believed to be James J. Duggan and Louis J. Donne, tourists from St. Louis, were killed at a Michigan Central railroad crossing, four miles west of here, yesterday afternoon when their automobile was struck by an eastbound passenger train. They presumably were watching a train approaching from the east and failed to notice an eastbound train.

Donne was killed instantly, while Duggan died a few minutes after the accident. The automobile bore Missouri license No. 571-238.

St. Louis relatives of James J. Duggan of 3849 A Flad avenue were informed today of the accident in which Duggan and Louis J. Donne of 2646 Geyer avenue were killed. Duggan was 24 years old and was employed by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. as a supervisor. Donne, who was 26 years old, was a bookkeeper. Relatives said the young men owned the automobile jointly and departed in it on a vacation trip about a week ago. They left Chicago this morning on their way to Detroit.

CHEERING CROWDS IN NEW YORK MEET 5 ATLANTIC FLYERS

Marine Parade Escorts Commander Byrd and His Three Aids and Chamberlain Up the Bay.

GREETING TO EXTEND OVER FOUR DAYS

After Procession Through Streets Mayor Walker Officially Receives Aviators at City Hall.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 18.—To the acclaim of their countrymen, five men stepped back today onto American soil, the soil they last saw dropping away from under them as they started on non-stop flights to Europe.

Crowds at the Battery broke into tumultuous cheers of welcome as the city tug Macom nosed into pier A with the flyers at noon.

The Macom came from quarantine where it had taken Commander Richard E. Byrd, and his three-man crew of the monoplane "America," and Clarence Chamberlain, pilot of the monoplane "Columbia," from the liner Leviathan, on which they returned from Europe.

As the Macom steamed up the bay harbor, craft whistled a shrill greeting, fire boats sprayed fountains of water into the air, the guns of Governors Island boomed a nine gun salute, and airplanes hovered overhead.

Lindbergh Greets Airman. Among the persons who made the trip down the bay to welcome the flyers home was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who preceded these five over the Atlantic air route. Others on the Macom were the mother of Commander Byrd and the wives of Bert Acosta and George Noville, pilot and engineer of the "America." No relatives met Berni Balchen, the "America's" relief man, as he is unmarried and his mother and sisters live in Norway.

Commander Byrd's wife was at the Battery to greet him as he stepped from the Macom. Chamberlain's wife was with him on the Leviathan.

As the Macom came alongside the dock, Graham McNamee, announcer for the National Broadcasting Co., began a running account of the welcome for the millions unable to greet the procession through lower New York.

The Macom's arrival was just at the time when the great office buildings were disgorging their thousands into the streets for the lunch hour.

Paper Snow Storm.

As the tug was docked, ticker tape and torn paper was tossed from a thousand windows in the flyers' honor and the paper snowstorm that is Manhattan's accolade began falling through the air.

Hundreds of policemen who had been waiting at the Battery since 9 o'clock with little or nothing to do, suddenly found themselves confronted with the almost impossible task of keeping the crowds sufficiently in order to permit formation of the procession in which the flyers would ride to City Hall.

As the flyers left the Macom they were called to the microphone by McNamee, who asked them to say something to the millions unable to greet them in person.

"Hello, New York," Byrd said and the other four filed behind him. "Hello, hello, hello, hello." "They are greeting New York," McNamee said to the radio audience, "and when they greet New York they greet America."

The parade started from the Battery at 12:15. Led by a marine band and detachments of soldiers and sailors, the ten automobiles composing the welcoming party and the returning airmen proceeded at lively speed up Broadway.

Commander Byrd rode in the first car with Whalen of the Mayor's committee, bowing and waving to the cheering throngs that lined the way and which were kept on the sidewalks only by the greatest effort of police. In succeeding cars the other airmen and their relatives rode, each one responding with smiling salutations to the cheers.

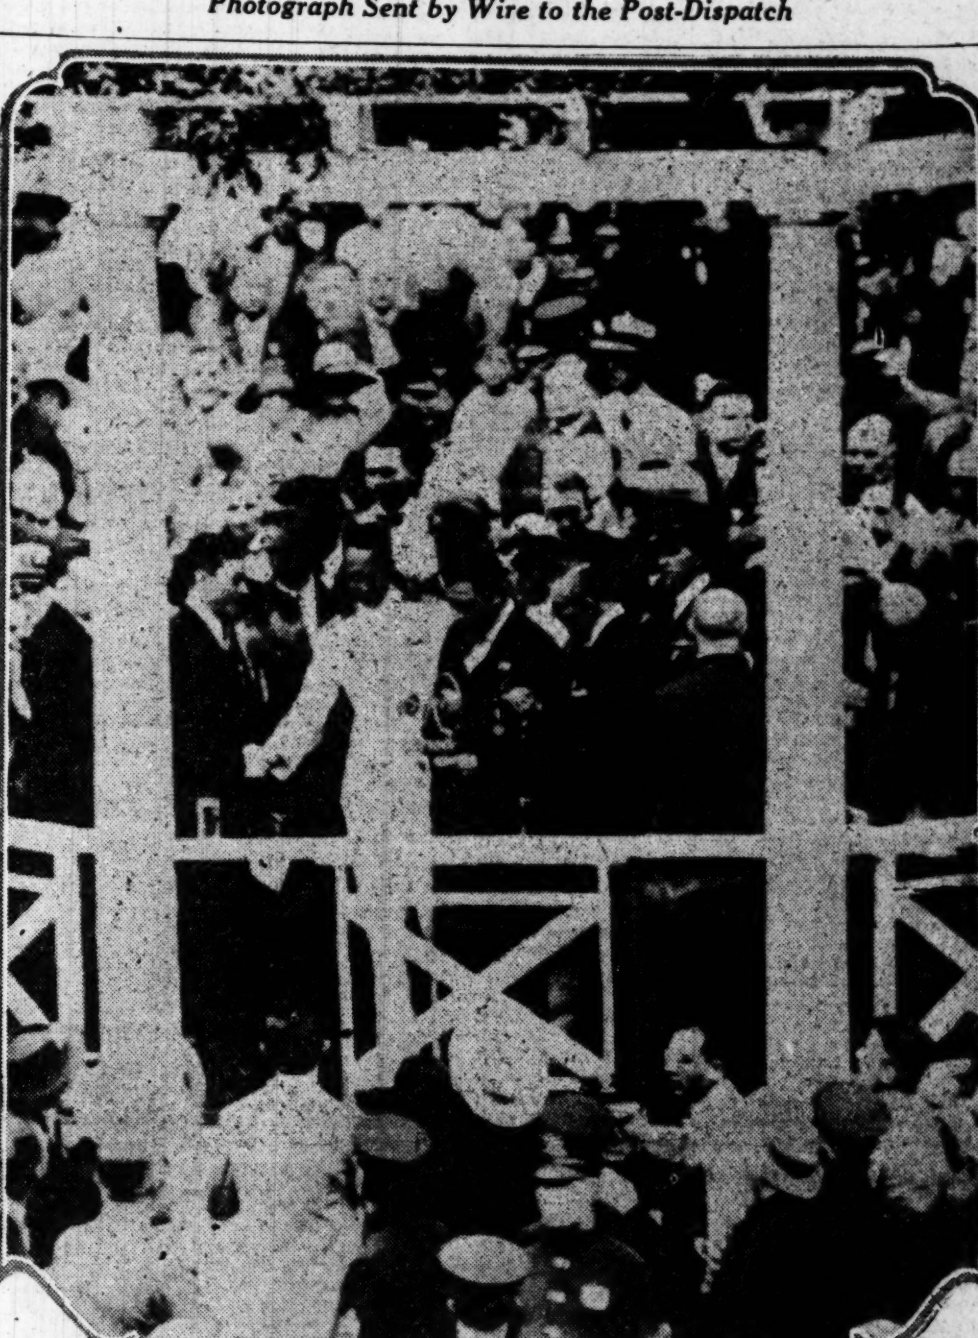

As the procession was passing through the narrow canyon of the lower city, large drops of rain began to fall.

Crowds Brave Rain. At 12:30 the flyers arrived at City Hall where a crowd was gathered rivaling that at the Battery. The grand stands in the

INTRUDERS SHOOT AMERICAN CONSUL AT PUERTO MEXICO

Government Demands Arrest and Punishment of Attackers; Evidence of Plot Reported.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, July 18.—Evidence of an attempt to assassinate William E. Chapman, American consul at Puerto Mexico, Mexico, has been transmitted to American officials after an investigation by Chapman's colleague, J. J. Sparks.

Chapman was shot and seriously wounded in his residence at the Mexican port yesterday. Sparks informed the American Embassy at Mexico City that two men had entered the building in the night through a skylight, one armed with a pistol and the other with a knife. When Chapman arose to investigate, they made no demand upon him but followed him back to his bedroom and shot him.

The Embassy made immediate representation to the Mexican Foreign Office asking for the apprehension and punishment of Chapman's assailants.

Chapman was sent from his former post at Torreon to Puerto Mexico last fall but did not open a consular office at the latter place until March. His home is in Allamore, Ok.

TICKET GOUGING AT FUNERAL IN NEW YORK BARED

Informer Tells U. S. Attorney Speculators Got $20 for Admission Cards to Services for Jacob Schiff.

"SCALPERS" HIT BY INVESTIGATION

Bemoan Their Inability to Get Tickets for Dempsey-Sharkey Fight—Theaters Put Up Bars.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 18.—Ticket "scalping," known for years as one of the best "rackets" along Broadway, has become, in the parlance of the Rialto, "tough, very tough."

This "scalping" or selling of tickets by speculators at increased charges, extended not alone to theater tickets, an investigation by Federal Attorney Tuttle has disclosed, but also to prize fights, to the reception to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, and in one case to a funeral.

In connection with the Dempsey-Sharkey fight on Thursday, "scalpers" are reported bemoaning their inability to get any of the tickets, while heretofore they are said to have been able to get as many ringside seats as they could handle.

Theater Bars Speculator. The treasurer of a theater housing a Broadway play is reported to have sent out word that no more tickets would be given the agencies. In the past, it was said, this theater consistently sold all its choice seats to speculators for $1 each above box office prices.

"It's always an effort for me to say anything after Commander Byrd gets through," he said, "because he does it so well. I am such a contrast."

All I would like to say is that we attended the reception in the neighborhood of 30 cities in Europe but none was so large as this. However, they all displayed about the same enthusiasm, and it reflects the opinion of the thousands of people of Europe for the people of America. I want to thank you.

The flyers re-entered their automobiles after the ceremony at City Hall and were driven to the Eternal Light at Madison Square.

Lindbergh Avoids Parade. Col. Lindbergh did not ride in the procession. When he appeared to greet the flyers and make the trip down the bay on the Commodore, a place was arranged for him in the parade, but as the flyers took their places in the automobiles at the Battery he slipped quietly away.

"Aren't you going to be in the parade, Colonel?" a police officer who recognized him asked.

"No," replied Lindbergh with a smile. "I've had my day."

Then entered an automobile and drove north by a course other than the line of march.

At Madison Square the crowd had waited despite the rain, and the grandstands were filled with half-drenched men and women who cheered as the flyers appeared.

The parade moved into the wide stretch of pavement at the intersection of Broadway and Fifth avenue by the Flatiron building, below the square, the rain stopped although the sky remained overcast.

A guard of honor stood at attention around the monument of Eternal Light. First Byrd, and then the other flyers, stepped forward and laid a wreath at the monument's base. A band blared forth the "Star Spangled Banner" and the crowd was still.

The aviators then were lined up before the reviewing stand where their relatives and officials for news photographs.

Although the day was not designated a holiday, Mayor Walker had urged that the holiday spirit prevail and that there be a "glorious display" of flags, "so that with an uncertain voice we may acclaim the men who, by their self-sacrificing heroism, have added so much to the glory which is our country's."

The first gesture of acclaim for the flyers on this side of the Atlantic came when the Leviathan was a few hours out of New York Harbor. It was a marine salute from a French liner, outboard bound. The Paris home for the brief ceremony and her deep-throated sirens roared, to be answered by long blasts from the Leviathan.

Four-Day Celebration. The arrival of the city's welcoming tug, Macoma, alongside the Leviathan at Quaxantine was the beginning of the home-coming celebration which is to continue for four days. The celebration will be a series of events, including a parade, a banquet, and a fireworks display.

Rain Falls at Ceremony. As the City Hall ceremonies were in progress, a drizzle changed into a drenching rain. After the medals were pinned on, the ceremony began to melt away. By this time 1 o'clock was approaching and work in office buildings had to be resumed. Umbrellas opened like black mushrooms in the crowd, and those without them turned up coat collars and held soggy newspapers over their heads.

The spot where the ceremonies were being held was protected from the rain by an awning, so the flyers and city officials remained dry while those in the street and the uncovered grandstands were drenched.

After the medals were bestowed, Commander Byrd spoke to the crowd through loud speakers hung about the square. "I think you're all very brave heroes," he said, "to brave the rain."

In making reference to Chamberlain, he said, "The crowd cheered off to him."

Favorable Winds Found at High Altitudes, Byrd Says

Atlantic Flyer Also Mentions Importance of Radio in Locating Airplanes When in Fog

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, July 18.—Commander Richard E. Byrd came home today to say that the Atlantic has not been conquered and perhaps not yet softened from the air. "We were just pioneers," he said. "Our flights were just one of a number of pioneer flights that will have to be made before the air lanes over the Atlantic have been charted."

"We got much important scientific data that we could not possibly have gained had we had fair weather. We took off in bad weather and we expected bad weather. The only thing that was unexpected was the storm over France."

"No piece of mechanism is perfect. There is still danger to life for aviators and risk of loss of great sums of money to backers of flights over the Atlantic, but as planes are built now, especially planes like the America, they can fly through almost any kind of weather, and the engines crowd through loud speakers hung about the square. "I think you're all very brave heroes," he said, "to brave the rain."

In making reference to Chamberlain, he said, "The crowd cheered off to him."

Byrd Voices Appreciation. "This is the second time within 13 months that I find myself having the pleasant duty of thanking the greatest city in the world for her hospitality and open-armed welcome as only she can give," said Byrd. "Naturally, my shipmates and I are greatly moved and deeply and humbly appreciative."

Chamberlain accepted his medal with the briefest of speeches. "It is always an effort for me to say anything after Commander Byrd gets through," he said, "because he does it so well. I am such a contrast."

Rain Falls at Ceremony. As the City Hall ceremonies were in progress, a drizzle changed into a drenching rain. After the medals were pinned on, the ceremony began to melt away. By this time 1 o'clock was approaching and work in office buildings had to be resumed. Umbrellas opened like black mushrooms in the crowd, and those without them turned up coat collars and held soggy newspapers over their heads.

The spot where the ceremonies were being held was protected from the rain by an awning, so the flyers and city officials remained dry while those in the street and the uncovered grandstands were drenched.

After the medals were bestowed, Commander Byrd spoke to the crowd through loud speakers hung about the square. "I think you're all very brave heroes," he said, "to brave the rain."

In making reference to Chamberlain, he said, "The crowd cheered off to him."

Byrd Voices Appreciation. "This is the second time within 13 months that I find myself having the pleasant duty of thanking the greatest city in the world for her hospitality and open-armed welcome as only she can give," said Byrd. "Naturally, my shipmates and I are greatly moved and deeply and humbly appreciative."

Chamberlain accepted his medal with the briefest of speeches. "It is always an effort for me to say anything after Commander Byrd gets through," he said, "because he does it so well. I am such a contrast."

All I would like to say is that we attended the reception in the neighborhood of 30 cities in Europe but none was so large as this. However, they all displayed about the same enthusiasm, and it reflects the opinion of the thousands of people of Europe for the people of America. I want to thank you.

Birger Praised Slayers of Adams After Crime, Witness Says

ble, which had a box of chewing tobacco in it, at the cabin. Rone said. A Birger hanger-on bought the car and Birger bought the tobacco, the witness continued.

Parley at Shady Rest. "I saw Connie Ritter, Birger, Art Newman, Ray Hyland, and the Thomassons boys go into a room at Shady Rest that night," Rone said. "They were in the room 20 minutes. Ritter, Birger and Newman were there. They were talking about the murder of Joe Adams."

"When they came out of the room after an hour all told, Elmo stayed at Shady Rest. Harry Thomasson left the cabin. Hyland stayed at Shady Rest. Connie Ritter, Steve George, Danny Brown and a boy they called Todd stayed too. I stayed with them."

"Do you know what the defendants talked about in that room?" "No, sir."

The testimony shifted to the morning of Dec. 12, when Birger and Elmo left the room that morning in a Ford roadster, toward Marion, said Rone.

"When did you see them again?" "They came back at 1 o'clock with Harry Thomasson. They went into the basement, where Connie Ritter and his wife and Art Newman and his wife were."

"Ritter and Newman went upstairs in the east front room. Ritter called the Thomassons boys and Hyland into the room. I went upstairs into the room. I could see into the room. I was five feet away."

Says He Saw Pistol. "Connie Ritter pulled out a pistol and gave it to Art Newman. Newman handed it to Ray Hyland. Hyland handed it to Harry Thomasson. Hyland took the pistol and went to the basement."

"Where were Harry and Elmo Thomasson?" "In the room."

"Did you see Connie do anything else?" "Yes, he addressed an envelope."

"What did Newman say?" "He told Ritter to disguise his hands. Ritter said he would do it. Ritter wrote a note."

"What did Hyland do next?" "He held the pistol on the table. Ritter gave it to Harry Thomasson."

"What was done with the note?" "Connie Ritter gave it to Elmo Thomasson."

"After the letter was given to Elmo Thomasson, what did Connie Ritter, Newman, his wife and the woman you called Oiler, do?" "They left in a Chrysler."

"What did Elmo and Harry Thomasson and Ray Hyland do?" "They left the cabin in another car."

"What time was that?" "About 2:30."

Tells of Birger's Arrival. "When did Birger come to the cabin?" "At 4:30. He came in his Buick sedan."

"When did you leave the cabin?" "I left with Birger about 5 o'clock in his car. We went to Marion."

"What did you do?" "We went to the bus station and then to Johnston City and West Frackford. We went back to Marion, following a bus to the square in Marion."

"Birger talked to the bus driver and then said to me, 'Joe Adams got killed. I saw him talk to Lory Price there, then he went to Art Boswell's office. He stayed five minutes.'"

Lory Price was a State Highway policeman, murdered with his wife by the Birger gang five weeks after the Adams killing. Boswell is State's Attorney of Williamson County.

The witness explained that Harvey Dundy, another Birger gangster, was with him and Birger on the ride. Taking up the story again, Rone said he and Birger and Dundy drove to Dover. They went to Kate Williams' house. "Harry and Elmo Thomasson and Hyland were there when we arrived," he said. "We picked them up and drove to Christpher to see if Carl Shelton had come in on the bus."

"Whom did you see in Christopher?" "The defense developed also that, according to Wilson, Birger did not mention Adams' name. Wilson's version was, 'I want you boys to go over to West City and call a man to his front door and kill him.'"

Widow of Murdered Mayor on Stand Tells of Shooting. Mrs. Joe Adams, a determined-looking woman, with grimly compressed lips, faced State's Attorney Martin when she took the stand in the forenoon. She did not glance toward Birger. Newman watched her intently, but Birger and Hyland stared straight ahead.

Mrs. Adams told how, in November, 1926, Birger called her on the telephone. "This you, Mrs. Adams?" she quoted Birger as saying. "Where is Joe? Have you got insurance on his life? We're going to kill him."

State's Attorney Martin asked her to tell what followed. Defense attorneys were overruled. Birger continued, "There's nobody here but me and the children." He said, "There's not much use in us coming over, then, is there?" I told him, "No, unless you want to see the children." He said he didn't want women and children.

She then related how an attempt was made to dynamite her house at 1 o'clock in the morning when she and her husband were at home. Defense attorneys objected, but the witness finished the story with, "We found a big hole in the yard."

"Do you recall what happened at your home about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Dec. 12?" "Yes, I do."

Tells of Murderers' Visit. Mrs. Adams said she remembered her lips trembled. "Two young men knocked on our door. I got up and went to the door. They asked me if Joe Adams lived here. I said he did. They asked me if he was home. I said, 'yes, but he was asleep.' I asked them if I would do. They said they wanted to see Joe personally. They said they had a letter from Carl Shelton. I went back and got Joe. I walked beside him to the door."

"What did they do then?" "They shot him."

Five or six shots were fired, she said, and the slayers ran from the porch. She did not know where they went, but her 15-year-old daughter, Arian, ran after them, and she followed her daughter into the yard. She returned to the house immediately, and found her husband lying on the floor.

"What happened then?" "Lived 30 minutes."

"He called me to him and said he had some money in his pocket."

Attorney Speaks of Plot. Attorney Karch began his cross-examination of Birger but turned it over to Attorney Dillon, Newman's attorney, after a few inconsequential queries. Dillon tacitly admitted for his client the fact of the murder conspiracy by asking, "You know, don't you, that before anything was said about paying the boys everybody went to Harrisburg?"

David Garrison and Alva Wilson, the State's surprise witnesses, preceded Rone on the witness stand.

"Alva Wilson and I went to Shady Rest the night of Dec. 8," Garrison testified. "Charles Birger was there. He was a convicted robber. I said, 'What do you want? I'll give you $100 to go to West City and kill a man named Joe Adams. I'll supply you with a car and a driver.' I said, 'What the hell do you think we are, crazy?'"

Attorney Smith turned on Garrison with a caustic cross-examination in which he stressed the fact that the witness was a convicted robber. Garrison's surly youth of 20, gave him snarl for snarl. The witness said, enlarging his story, that he and his pal were driving in a stolen automobile and stopped at Birger's place to get a drink. The cross-examination was proceeding with rising anger on the part of witness and questioner when court recessed for luncheon.

After the luncheon recess a brief clash between Attorney Smith and the witness terminated Garrison's stay on the stand. Smith got Garrison to say that he had his interview with Birger, in which the murder was discussed, the first time they met.

"You didn't know Birger, did you?" Smith barked at him. "I did, you can't fool me on Charlie Birger," Garrison shot back. He was excused.

Wilson Corroborates Story. Alva Wilson, his pal, took the stand.

Wilson described the interview with Birger just as Garrison did and said, "I told Birger I might steal, but I wouldn't kill anyone."

Birger smiled as if dismissing the story, and his lawyer, Smith, pounced on the witness with a staccato fire of questions.

Wilson explained the travels of himself and Harrison that day by saying, "We were dodging the law."

The defense developed also that, according to Wilson, Birger did not mention Adams' name. Wilson's version was, "I want you boys to go over to West City and call a man to his front door and kill him."

for me to take it because he was going to die."

"How long did he live after that?" "About 30 minutes."

"Where did he die?" "On the floor."

In response to questions she said she saw only two wounds, on the left side.

She then related how the murderers had handed a note to her husband before they shot him and how a Deputy Sheriff had taken the note from Adams' hand after the shooting. This was the decoy note purporting to come from Carl Shelton which the State's Attorney had read at the hearing.

"Did you ever see Harry Thomasson?" the State's Attorney asked. "Yes I saw him at the Marion jail after the shooting."

Mrs. Adams replied. "Was he one of the young men who came to your house and shot your husband?" "Yes, he looks like one of them."

On cross-examination the defense tried to get before the jury mention of the bombing from an airplane of "Shady Rest." Birger's fortified rendezvous, near Marion, but Mrs. Adams said she did not know anything about it. She left the stand after 25 minutes of testimony.

Mayor's Daughter on Stand. Mayor Adams' daughter, a freckled-faced girl wearing a boyish bob, followed her mother to the stand.

"What relation was Joe Adams, the deceased in this case, to you?" she was asked.

"Daddy," Arian replied. Circuit Judge Miller at this juncture admonished Attorney Karch and Smith of defense counsel in low tones at the bench about cluttering up the record with repetitious objections.

Under questioning of State's Attorney Martin, Arian told of Birger's visit to their home Oct. 18, 1926. "Charlie Birger drove up to where my father was standing in front of Gus Adams' house," the daughter testified, "and pointed a gun at him. Birger said he was going to kill my father."

"What happened at your home Dec. 12?" "My father was killed."

After describing the visit of the two young men with a note for her father, she said: "Daddy walked up to the door and they handed him the letter and began shooting. Then they ran off the porch."

"I ran after them for a block," she said. "They got in a car and drove away. I turned around and came back."

"I ran back into the house to see daddy. We called a doctor, but he died in half an hour."

Constable Marshall Jones, stepfather of the murdered man, corroborated briefly the details of the shooting.

Hyland Seen in Murder Case. Miss Earle Sanders of St. Louis, the next witness, was sworn in at the time of the hearing. She saw the slayers' car drive to within a short distance of Adams' house and watched the driver climb out and press a button on the engine. She testified Hyland as the driver.

Attorney Dial, counsel for the defense, asked her to identify the slayers. She said she saw only two slayers, one of whom she identified as Harry Thomasson. The other she identified as Charlie Birger.

The State called Deputy Sheriff Joe Talford, who described how he used to trace the decoy note, which he handed it to Gus Adams. The latter, recalled to the stand, testified as to its receipt, and had turned the letter over to State's Attorney Martin for Coroner's inquest.

The note was introduced and identified by Adams.

Miss Sarah Watson, whom Miss Sanders, who was her companion on the walk past Adams' house the day of the murder, testified that she saw the slayers' car drive to within a short distance of Adams' house and watched the driver climb out and press a button on the engine. She testified Hyland as the driver.

Last Tuesday Misses married Mrs. Anna Schmeier, 56, a widow, at De Soto, Mo. After their marriage, Mrs. Misses drew $1430, inherited from a former husband, from a bank and they came to St. Louis preparatory to moving to a farm in Washington County, Misses told reporters.

Last week, Misses said, an elderly man came to his flat in the guise of a painter sent by the landlord to survey the place for interior decoration. The same man, Misses related, came back at 7:45 o'clock this morning with two younger men and said he was ready to start. Misses admitted the trio. One of them, according to his story, draw a revolver and when he made a move as if to protest, struck him over the head twice. They took $65 from Miesse's watch pocket and the $1430 which his wife had hidden in a small pocket sewed into her underskirt. The robbers apparently knew before hand where the pair kept their money.

Binding the pair with old rags and a rope found in the house, the trio warned them as they departed not to make an outcry.

Miesse said he managed to crawl

Sunday night, Miesse said, they returned home to find the door to their flat ajar. Neighbors, he added, later told them they had seen a man enter it. Nothing was taken.

AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

PLEASED WITH FORD APOLOGY
Will Lead to Objectives of Conference on Jewish Rights, Officers Of Body Assert.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—In a statement issued from its headquarters here yesterday the American Jewish Congress discussed the action of Henry Ford in stopping his fight on the Jews. It asserted: "The retraction of Mr. Ford of articles unfavorable to the Jewish race that appeared in the Dearborn Independent and his apology to the Jews of the country for these articles, in the opinion of the officers of the American Jewish Congress, will lend incentive to objectives of the conference on Jewish rights. Anti-Jewish articles contained in the Dearborn Independent, it is pointed out, due to their wide circulation, and because of the power of Henry Ford's name as the owner of the publication and sponsor of the article, has had the tendency of aggravating anti-Semitic sentiment in countries in Europe."

"Mr. Ford's unequivocal retraction of the entire anti-Jewish campaign of the Independent and statement that he was 'for the Jews,' it is believed, in a large measure, will convert feeling against the Jewish populations in countries of Europe."

The statement relating to Ford was incidental to an announcement that the furtherance of campaign for the prevention of excesses against Jewish communities of eastern and central Europe, and expansion of the scope and activities of the committee of Jewish delegations, constitute the primary objects of the conference on Jewish rights, to be convened in Zurich, Aug. 17.

CONVICT KILLED, ANOTHER HURT IN KNIFE FIGHT

Robert Harrison Dies and Carl F. Pittman Is Taken to Prison Hospital at Jefferson City.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, July 18.—Two St. Louis convicts in the isolation quarters of the State Penitentiary yesterday fought a duel with knives. One of them, Robert Harrison, died of his wounds before he could be given medical attention. The other, Carl F. Pittman, 22 years old, was taken to the prison hospital in serious condition. Prison authorities have been unable to determine the cause of the fight.

Both men were known as refractory prisoners and had been in the isolation quarters since October, 1926, when they participated in an attempted prison break in which seven convicts overpowered two guards, took their revolvers and attempted to shoot their way over the south wall. In the break two convicts were shot down by guards and the others cornered within the prison grounds. Pittman received an additional two-year sentence for another attempted break in January, 1926, when he and another convict went over the wall in daylight and attempted to swim the Missouri River then full of floating ice. They turned back and were captured when guards fired at them.

The fight started yesterday morning when occupants of the isolation quarters were taken to the basement of a prison hall for their weekly bath. The knives used were steak knives which had been stolen from the dining hall and sharpened and pointed. From the fact that both men had them, prison authorities surmise that the row may have started in a quarrel over plans for another attempted break. Pittman probably will be tried for murder in Cole County Circuit Court, where he still faces trial for his part in the attempted escape last October.

Pittman, an army deserter, was serving an 11-year sentence imposed in St. Louis in October, 1924, when he confessed to numerous holdups of groceries and filling stations. He had served a previous term at Booneville Reformatory. Harrison was serving a 10-year sentence imposed in Jefferson County in 1925 for burglary and larceny. His home was in St. Louis.

REFUSES TO LEND AID TO REED

Former Missourian Attacks Senator's Record in Congress.

By the Associated Press.
FULTON, Mo., July 18.—Charging that Senator James A. Reed of Missouri has devoted all his powers to "vituperation and destruction," O. D. Jones of Jacksonville, Tex., former Missourian, has refused to lend his aid to a movement, now being conducted by Ed A. Glenn of Louisiana, Mo., looking toward a campaign for Reed for the presidency.

A letter from Jones to Glenn, replying to a request that he participate in the proposed campaign, bitterly attacks Reed's political career, and says that in the 16 years that Reed has been in the Senate, "he has not written or sponsored a single piece of important legislation. No sense of state pride can wipe out memory of Senator Reed's conduct during the World War when he did all it seemed possible for any man to do to obstruct the Government in its prosecution of the war." Jones continued, "Neither can I forget his opposition to the Versailles peace treaty. I hold him, more than any other man (not even excepting Lodge), responsible for creating the situation whereby the United States deserted its associates in the war and made a separate peace with Germany. No other page in American history, I think, is as black as that. It alone is sufficient to cause the hatred there is in the world for America."

BOY INJURED IN 40-FOOT FALL

Plunges Through Car Barn Sky-Light After Seeing Movie.

Indore Geeser, 15 years old, of 6022A Barmore avenue, fell 40 feet through a skylight of the De Ballvere avenue street car sheds last night. He is in a serious condition at City Hospital with a fractured left leg and a probable fracture of the skull.

Geeser and a companion, Harry Friedland of 6038 Barmore avenue, had viewed the movies of an outdoor theater at Laurel avenue and Delmar boulevard, from the roof. The accident occurred as they walked to a ladder by which they planned to descend.

WOMAN KILLED; COP SHOT, HELD FOR HER DEATH

Wife of Auditor of A. T. &
T. Co., in St. Louis on Business, Shot to Death
in New York Apartment.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, July 18.—Mrs.
Henry B. Quinlan, 48 years old,
wife of an auditor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., was shot to death last evening in her ground-floor apartment at 712 West 184th street. Accused of the murder, Patrolman Walter Scharland, 45, a widower, is in Columbus Hospital with bullet wounds in his head and chest, alleged by police to have been self-inflicted after the killing of Mrs. Quinlan.

Scharland, who was infuriated with Mrs. Quinlan, told detectives Mrs. Quinlan seized his automatic pistol from a holster, fired two bullets into his body, killed his pet
poodle dog and then shot herself.
According to the detectives, Scharland, who will be totally blind if he survives the wounds,
was contradicted by Mrs. Mildred Grover and Mrs. Irene McArdie, who were in the apartment at the time of the shooting.

Asked for Police Protection, Scharland and Mrs. Quinlan. It was reported, were acquaintances of several years' standing, and of late he had become enamored of her, but his attentions were not well received. Saturday afternoon, police said, Scharland telephoned to Mrs. Quinlan and threatened her. Later she telephoned to Wadsworth Avenue Station and asked that a policeman be sent to protect her.

Patrolman Adolph Flincken stood guard at Mrs. Quinlan's apartment most of the night and left when Scharland failed to appear.

When Scharland called with his poodle dog about 4 o'clock he was shown into the apartment. Mrs.
Grover arrived soon and was shown into the same room. Hearing Mrs.
Grover enter, Mrs. Quinlan turned to her and cried: "Mildred, run,
call the police, he's got a gun."

A few minutes later the door bell rang and Mrs. Quinlan went to the foyer to admit Mrs. Mc-Ardie. As Mrs. Grover ran toward the main hall, she heard a shot and then Mrs. Quinlan cry out: "My God, it's gone right through me."

Says Officer Held Revolver.
David Fotheringham, superintendent of the apartment house,
heard the shot and ran in search of a policeman. Passing the front window, he said, he saw Scharland standing there with the revolver in his hand. Fotheringham notified the police and detectives were sent to the house in an ambulance.

Breaking into Mrs. Quinlan's apartment, the detectives found Mrs. McArdie in a corner of the living room. On the floor of the foyer were the bodies of Mrs.
Quinlan and the dog. Beside them lay Scharland.

His pistol was about two feet away. Mrs. Quinlan had been shot through the heart. When the detectives approached, Scharland struggled to reach the revolver and his hands were groping within a foot of the weapon when a detective kicked the pistol out of his reach.

Scharland, despite his wounds,
remained conscious even after he was taken to the hospital and signed a statement. The latter said Scharland accused Mrs. Quinlan of accepting clothing and presents
from him and "throwing him down
when he was broke."

Scharland was detained to the property clerk's office in Manhattan.

Scharland was charged with homicide, but surgeons said his recovery is doubtful.
Mrs. Quinlan's husband is in St.
Louis on business for his company.

Matthew Quinlan, a traveling auditor for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., living at the Melbourne Hotel, was quoted as saying the woman slain in New York was his wife, but when seen this morning by a Post-Dispatch reporter he denied being her husband, although he said he thought he knew her. He said he would not go to New York. Later he checked out of the hotel for New York.

Quinlan has been in St. Louis
several months engaged in work
for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

NUGENTS STORE WIDE JULY CLEARING SALE

The policy of this store is not to carry any merchandise into next season. Included are odds and ends, soiled and mussed merchandise of all kinds. All former selling prices are forgotten. Many articles marked at cost and less than cost. Many at half price. This is the one big semi-annual opportunity for thrifty shoppers to make unusual savings on items that still have many months of useful service. In many cases lots are small and will go quickly at these reduced prices. We advise early attendance.

THE WOMAN
OF IT

By Marguerite Moores Marshall

A PORTRAIT.

She is the holy light that burns forever;
There are no words to match her even glow;
Her smile means men will never know
Till from their tight-hugged earth
She is the ocean's calm; far better
To drown in all her vastness than
To be unknown of her magic mystery—
Not to be pilfered in a night of bliss.

Although one plagued her in a trifter's way,
She pitied him that stabbed her,
Let him stay—
Madness she never understood.
Her blindness
Was part of her intense integrity.
Nor did she know the rule for Such as he—
Give love or nothing—never offer kindness.

LEE DONLACHEY.

Give Him the Benefit of the Doubt.

S LIGHTLY to pervert a proverb or two, making mountains out of mere molehills seems to be one of woman's favorite occupations and one of marriage's dangerous indulgences. A wife often makes both herself and her husband horribly unhappy by unjust suspicions. Yet it is our notion that a woman can love a man only when she finds it easy to trust him.

Here is where the ultra-wise and sophisticated are going to find their plucked eyebrows and murmur, "The poor innocent!" Theirs is the type of woman who considers it a mistake ever to trust the male of the species, whose philosophy is perfectly expressed in the terse, grammatical line from yesterday's Broadway comedy: "I believe in no man until I see him with a fly on his chest." This, I am sorry to say, is not for love. May he succeed in never being cheated by men, but how it's cheated by life! How much a woman misses who is not a romantic, who can never give and take love freely, generously, unsuspiciously!

The point is that, unless she is absolutely hard-boiled, a woman makes herself wretched by not having the courage of her love and trust. We have more than once encountered her at the business of suspicion. In real life, plowing her heart with anger, harrowing it with hatred, over a husband's unexpected absence, or the idle tale of "being seen" with some other woman. T. O. of the new novels, written by women about women, show this same evil suspicion at work.

Elmer Kelley, in "Home, James," has taken the old Sunday supplement tale of the rich girl who marries the chauffeur and made it human, humorous, tragic, tender. She is the girl-wife almost losing the happiness for which she has dared much, because she cannot keep faith in her husband, in the face of superficially damaging circumstantial evidence. He is given no chance to explain, and he puts the case against the doubting wife trenchantly, as follows:

"In marriage, like everything else, you got to have confidence in the person you are doing business with. . . . A wife that don't know, after you've given her yourself, soul and body, and tender, private thoughts and everything you got in the world, matter how you dreamed you could use it for bettering yourself, why, she's a wife, as the novels say, in name only."

Another widely read woman writer, Mary Roberts Rinehart, presents in "Lost Ecstasy" the same unhappy picture of a woman who could not believe her husband when circumstances seemed to incriminate him. She wanted to believe him—so she said—but she just couldn't. Yet he had been true and honest; he was merely unskillfully involved with an infatuated female who tried to marry him without success, and when she couldn't have him, tried to spoil him for his wife.

The latter was finally—almost too late—reflect: "How could one be hard, when life was so insecure at the best, and so short? When every time the clock ticked there was just so much less time to live, to love and to be loved? When to quarrel was to lose precious time; time which was all one had."

It is her own love, her own heart, while the suspicious wife tortures, more than she tortures her husband. Often, if he be an American husband, the torture is entirely unnecessary. So often he is a decent person, loyal, honest, not too liver-like or tactful or thrilling but working hard at his job and not in the least inclined to stray after strange goddesses—except in his wife's overwrought imagination. She thinks she loves him—yet he insults him with innuendo and catchisms. She thinks she loves him—yet she multiplies some harmless word or glance or association until she has read into it a thousand sly meanings. She thinks she loves him—yet her jealousy is sleepless.

Perfect love catches out fear. Even imperfect love might give the beloved the benefit of the doubt. Maybe we are a sentimental idiot, but if a woman cares for a man, we should think she would prefer being fooled by him to being unjust to him—and distrust makes her unjust.

Children's Bedtime Story

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

The Chuck Who Remembered

Who doth each day some knowledge gain
In time to wisdom may attain.

—Old Mother West Wind.

O H, my, my, my, such a lot of excitement as there was on the Green Meadows! Goodness me, you never saw such excitement! Mrs. Coyote had just closed the four children of Polly Chuck and Johnny Chuck away from their home, and then just as she was sure of catching one or two of them she had been discovered by Sammy Jay, and Bower the Hound had discovered the scent of Old Man Coyote and promptly had told all the Great World of the fact. The screaming of Sammy and the baying of Bower had startled and hurried Mrs. Coyote so that she had missed her jump at the fast-footed young Chucks. It hadn't seemed possible that she could miss them, but she had. That Chuck had been the nearest. Also, he had been the nearest to the door of his home.

Instantly that little Chuck flattened himself in the midst of the sweet clover

As that terrified young Chuck scampered over his doorstep and a sister were right at his heels. Never did three more frightened young Chucks live, unless it was the fourth one, who was still outside. Now this Chuck was a bold little Chuck, a venturesome little Chuck, and he had gone father from home than any of the others. So when Mrs. Coyote sprang at his fat brother she sprang right between this venturesome little Chuck and his home. But if this little Chuck was bold and venturesome, he was also smart. He was smart enough to remember what he had been taught by his mother, Polly Chuck. The instant Mrs. Coyote sprang, this little Chuck saw that he hadn't a chance to get back home. He would have to go right straight past Mrs. Coyote, and of course he couldn't possibly do that. What was it Mother Chuck had said? "When you have no place to go, lie flat and freeze."

Instantly that little Chuck flattened himself in the midst of the sweet clover. Unless you have seen a Woodchuck flatten himself out, you have no idea how flat he can be. He just hugged the ground, did that bold little Chuck. The grasses and clover leaves hung over him and he didn't move. No, sir, he didn't move a particle. That was freezing. When one of the feathered folk or fur wearers keep perfectly still it is said to "freeze." That simply means that it is keeping just as still as it is frozen.

That little Chuck's heart was going thumpety-thumpety-thumpety-thump. Never in all his life had he wanted to run as he wanted to run then. Somehow it seemed as if running must be the only way of getting away from danger. But he remembered, and there he lay just as if no life was in him.

Mrs. Coyote, having missed the fattest young Chuck, looked hastily this way and that for the other young Chucks. She saw two of them scramble down the long hall of their home right at the heels of the one she had so nearly caught. There was a fourth, she was sure of it. She looked this way, she looked that way, hurriedly. No young Chuck greeted her hungry eyes. Where could the rascal have gone to? It must be that he had been so near the doorway of his home that he had been the first one in. Anyway, that is what she thought. Bower the Hound was baying more loudly than ever now. Farmer Brown's Boy had seen her over there by the house of Polly Chuck, and he was waiting at her. With a snarl of disappointment Mrs. Coyote raced toward where Old Man Coyote was waiting for her. She actually jumped right over that young Chuck who had remembered and was "freezing." She jumped right over him and didn't see him at all. You see, Mrs. Coyote had been looking for something moving, not for something perfectly still. That was why she had missed the little Chuck who had remembered. So, you see, it pays to remember what Mother tells you.

A Help for Hips.

NEW YORK.—Despite the triumph of diet and exercise the dressmakers have decided they must do something for the woman unfortunate enough to have hips. So they are making skirts which are called "hippers." There is nothing funny about them. They fall straight but they do make the hips look slim. The divided skirt also is a help to hips.

LAUGHING AROUND THE WORLD

with IRVIN S. COBB

The One Incurable Disease.

THAT great woman, Nellie Re-
well, who is one of the champion optimists of this world,
has in her abundant repertoire a story which she often tells in illustration of her point that a perfect pessimist will remain a perfect
pessimist no matter what happens.

The hero of her little narrative was named Sam. As she states the case, Sam, after a lifetime, consistently dedicated to being a chronic sorehead, died and through some error on the part of the higher authorities, went to heaven.

A month later a friend of his followed him to the Celestial City.
They met upon a street paved with gold.

"Hello Sam," said the new arrival. "I knew you had a grouch
on earth, but I thought when you got to heaven you would be satisfied. But you still have that sore look. What's the matter?"

"Say listen," said Sam. "When I crossed the River Jordan I got my feet wet and I've had a cold ever since. As I was climbing the golden stairs I knocked a feather out of one of my wings. I had to wait three weeks for a halo and when it did come it didn't fit worth a darn."

New Shade Is Daisy.
NEW YORK.—Daisy yellow is the new shade popular for coats. It is of the exact shade of the inside of a daisy and usually is set off by a huge bunch of artificial daisies posed on one's lapel. The coat blends with the sky colors, especially those of the turf, of the golf course and those of the blue and green of the sea that the vogue
of the color is assured.

A Cuckoo's Crest.
NEW YORK.—The French hair
dressers, always seeking something new, have evolved the crest coifture or crest shingle. In this style a lock of hair at the front of the head is turned back and raised at the crown and the ends allowed to fall over the forehead in a fringe.
Since the natural hair declines to remain long in this position, many coiffures of the vogue are wearing transformations so treated.

WORKING WIVES

By Lucy Lowell

THE wife who goes outside her home to earn a salary is a menace to the home, the nation and the race.

This is what a woman who has made a success of the home-making job writes me.

Perhaps she has old-fashioned ideas, for she declares that she does not think woman's place—
her real mission, that is—has been changed in the least by modern thought.

"If a woman," she says, "is not willing to take up the life of the home and become a good housekeeper, a good wife and companion to her husband and, above all,
a good mother, she has no right to consider matrimony."

"I believe if every woman who goes to the altar took with her these high ideals and the determination to realize them, the divorce court would go out of business."

"Furthermore, I believe every woman down in her heart feels the same way, for love of homemaking is natural to women, and any who says it is not merely blinds herself to what is real."

The writer of this letter knows several working wives. One, she tells me, has a 5-year-old daughter who stays at her grandma's from the time school is out in the afternoon till the mother comes from the job. And when the mother does come she is so nervous

cross and weary that she can't be bothered much with mothering or being a good wife, either.

Of course, the woman has nice furniture, beautiful clothes and a car. But, strangely enough, they don't seem to bring much happiness into her home.

"Sometimes when they visit us,"
my friend goes on, "my heart aches for the baby and husband. They sit at our table with eyes bulging
at sight of the home-made food,
so eager for a taste of something
well-cooked and not delicatessenmade that they forget all about behaving mannerly."

"And she can't see what she is doing to herself and her family.
In my opinion, the salary she makes is just that much theft from her daughter and her husband."

This is one woman's idea of the Working Wife.

What is YOUR idea? Is the woman who goes outside her home
to earn a salary an asset to this home and to society generally?
Or is the American home breaking down and disappearing partially because of her?

Please write me YOUR opinion.

URGES CHURCH TO
THE STATE

Rector Says Religious Bodies Should Reconcile Themselves to the Best
Use of Scientific Discoveries Which Tend Toward the Upward
Development of the Race—Favors Sterilization of Mentally Defective and Birth Control.—Proud of the Coming Generation.

Advocating a readjustment of the church's attitude toward moral standards, applying particularly to the intimate personal relationships
of life, the Rev. Henry H. Lewis, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Ann Arbor, Mich.,
read a paper at the recent Church Congress in San Francisco which caused quite a stir and brought up on himself the criticism of some of his fellow ministers.

To understand the significance of the Rev. Mr. Lewis' proposals it is necessary to read more of his address than the news summaries
that were published at the time.
From the full text the following excerpts are selected:

"What are some of the existing facts which confront us in moral life? If we can see with any clearness the chief factors in the moral situation of the present, we may be able in the light of that knowledge to gauge what should be the message of the church.

"The first thing, I believe, which strikes us all is that we have largely substituted for the family groups,
other and larger groups. A generation ago, the home, the children,
the cousins, the neighbors, made
the all important nucleus around which life was built and maintained. There was a sound home,
a simple goodness, a charm about it all. Today the scene is widely repeated. The emphasis has shifted.
We have other groups which form the centers around which life revolves: for older brother and sister in college—the fraternity and sisterhood; for mother her reading or social clubs or health culture group; for father the Rotary or Kiwanis; or lodge—clubs of all kinds—not to mention hotels for men and hotels for women. In the discussion of the present, moral situation such new groupings,
which often have usurped the central place of family life, should be recognized.

Living for the Moment.

"Also we have a greater independence of the individual than ever before. Most of us have been freed by economic pressures and the rush of things to blow upon our hands and go to work, and we have attained an independence
in spirit and in living, unthought of in the past. Is it any wonder that the philosophy of many is to live for the moment and to get the most out of life?

"Personally I have long felt that we have aided this extreme individualism in the youth of our Nation by our educational methods,
both in church and state. We divide life into compartments. We speak of childhood, and youth, and middle life, as though they had no connection. We have our grade schools, our high schools, our colleges, in which the individual lives
for the moment, with little regard for what may follow, in spite of the drumming of his teachers. In church life we do the same thing.
We have our kindergarten department, generally separate from everything else, and our church schools, which most pupils leave
at or out of the age of 14 or 15;
our confirmation classes, where in six weeks' time, or less, we manufacture a spiritual experience for the rest of his days.

"We do all in our power to create the impression that life is a disjointed affair, and not a spiritual growth that binds us all together and in which in order to play our part we must think of others, as well as of ourselves. The result is that many an individual has an independence which he amounts to complete disregard of any one else. Such an attitude has played, and is playing today, a huge role in the moral life of the time, and in no solution which the church may have to offer it will have to be taken into account.

"Or again, let us note another factor in the present moral situation, the advent of science.

Science and Morals.

"The introduction of science is
the outstanding fact of our time,
and in morals science has created
an entirely new moral situation.
For when you have introduced contraceptions you have changed our moral situation. You have destroyed a person from going beyond the accepted moral code fear of consequences. That fear is no longer rests in the breast of any scientifically educated man or woman, and along with the passing of that fear is also going a vast amount of ignorance and misin-formation upon the whole sexual relationship.

The results are only partially

BRITAIN AND JAPAN REACH TENTATIVE BASIS OF ACCORD

Their Delegates at Geneva
Set 500,000 Tons Roughly
as Cruiser Limit for U.
S. and England.

OBsolete VESSELS

These May Be Maintained

Plan to Be Presented to the Full Conference.

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, July 18.—An official communiqué, which indicated that the tripartite naval conference has taken a favorable turn, was issued today at the end of a meeting of the representatives of the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

The communiqué follows:
"Following discussions in the plenary meeting (last Thursday)
and acting on the suggestion there made that one of the chief difficulties was to reconcile the views of the British and Japanese delegations, conversations have been proceeding between the three powers with respect to auxiliary surface craft with the purpose of bridging those differences.

"The progress has been sufficiently encouraging to warrant further examination of the matter
in detail."
It became known the British delegates after consultation with the Japanese had agreed tentatively to take 500,000 tons roughly as a basis for discussion of a surface craft total for Great Britain and the United States.

This total tonnage figure, comprising cruisers and destroyers,
carries with it certain "ifs," "ands"
and "buts," notably concerning the craft with the purpose of patrol and convoy purposes, and restrictions upon the number of eight-inch guns which can be mounted on cruisers of less than 10,000 tons. It has been learned that a would-be low Japan practical party with the other two parties
as to submarines.

America's Attitude.
These auxiliary clauses of the proposed new plan of discussion,
however, do not perturb the American delegates in the least, for it is felt at their headquarters the suggestions can be dealt with one by one as a tentative agreement is reached on the main problem of tonnage limitation. Work upon the fresh proposals will be slow, it is said.

"There may even be two or three 'crises' in the course of the forthcoming week," one delegate exclaimed, "but the prevailing opinion seems to be that once a total for surface craft is even tentatively agreed on, the rest should be plain sailing, as compared to the four weeks struggle the conference has just gone through."

Japan's Formal Notice.
Viscount Ishii, in behalf of the Japanese, notified Hugh S. Gibson, chief American delegate, of the provisional agreement reached with Great Britain. The understanding is that the conversations were carried out in pursuance of Gibson's remark at the recent plenary session that there might be a chance of an understanding if the Japanese and British could reconcile their widely divergent views. The clause enjoining the three Powers to maintain obsolete warships apart from the total tonnage, on the basis of 25 per cent,
would put the total of cruisers and destroyers, so far as the United States and Great Britain are concerned, at 425,000 tons. The number of 10,000-ton cruisers would be fixed at about 12 for the United States and Great Britain, under that clause.

How the Cruiser-Building Race
Has Progressed.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—
Hardly had the ink dried on the 1921 Washington Naval treaty, fixing 10,000 tons as the maximum size for cruisers, before the naval experts of the signatory powers began a battle of wits to develop the most effective fighting craft possible under the tonnage permitted.

Restrained by but one other prohibition, that the armament must not be greater than 8-inch guns, the experts immediately began work to determine the proper ratio between gunpowder, speed,
protection and cruising radius.
Great Britain led the way in the building of this type of warcraft,
launching the first of the treaty
cruisers, the Suffolk, in February 1926. It now has 15 ships of this type either built, under construction or authorized. In addition it has 40 modern cruisers totalling 134,250 tons.
Japan has 19 first class cruiz-ers, but of this number several are considerably below the maximum 6,000-ton limit. It has six build-

FALL OF HANKOW AND HANYANG TO CONSERVATIVES REPORTED

Shanghai Dispatch Says Gen. Ho Chien, From Extremists.
LONDON, July 18.—A Reuter's dispatch from Shanghai says that a message from well-informed source... In Hankow reports the capture of both Hankow and Hanyang from the Southern extremists by Gen. Ho Chien, the Conservative Southern commander.

Gen. Ho Chien is reported to have carried out a coup d'état against the radicals, occupying Hanyang yesterday and Hankow today. He is also said to have captured the railway and other strategic points. The General has been commander of the garrison at Wuchang, opposite Hankow.

Probably the overthrow of the Communists, says Reuter's correspondent, has the approval of the Hankow Government as a preparatory move to the latter coming out on the side of the moderates. It was Gen. Ho Chien who, with his Honanese troops, broke up the Farmers' and Peasants' Union in Honan last month. The general recently executed several Communists at Wuchang.

STATE STARTS MANUFACTURE OF LIME DUST FOR FERTILIZER

New Industry at Milan, Sullivan County, Worked by Convicts From Penitentiary.
Manufacture of lime dust for fertilizer, to be sold at cost to farmers, was started today at Milan, Sullivan County, by convicts of the State Penitentiary, under direction of the Board of Penal Institutions. This new industry for the prison was authorized in a law passed by the last general assembly.

W. M. McGreer, member of the board, who was in St. Louis yesterday, stated that 20 convict trustees from the penitentiary, had been sent to Milan to operate the plant under the direction of a practical rock man and that two guards had been assigned to guard the convicts.

WOMAN GOVERNS ISLAND

Second Time in 200 Years That Sark Has Had Feminine Ruler.
SAIRK, Channel Islands, July 18.—For the second time in history the head of the Government of the Island of Sark is a woman—Mrs. Dudley Beaumont, daughter of the late William Collings, the former Seigneur. Sark has not had a woman governor for 200 years.

As Dame de Sark, Mrs. Beaumont officiated for the first time as President at a meeting of the Sark Council of the Island, Sark, six miles east of Guernsey, is the wildest of the Channel Islands. It is almost entirely rock-bound. The Seigneur and tenants of the Manor form practically a feudal court.

Sahara Desert Draws Tourists.
Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.
PARIS, July 2.—More and more tourists, fond of solitude, are being drawn away from the choked traffic of France to the Sahara desert, which is not yet too congested. To cross it in a big six-wheeled automobile or in a caterpillar car with seats convertible into berths is becoming almost a commonplace. The latest fad is to cross it by motor cycles. Two motor cyclists—French and Belgian—equipped with a radio set, have already traversed the Sahara from Oran, Algeria to Dakar in Senegal, by way of Timbuctoo.

ing aggregating 54,200 tons and 20,000-ton cruisers authorized. The United States has eight of this type of cruisers authorized. Two, the Pensacola and Salt Lake City, are partly built, while contracts for the others were let this year. In addition it has 10 modern cruisers of 7500 tons displacement each.

France and Italy, the other two signatory powers of the Washington treaty, also have started building 10,000-ton cruisers.

The United States reports indicate that the British designers in developing the 10,000-ton warcraft have leaned to a compromise ship, surrendering something in speed and gunpower for armor protection; that the Japanese are stressing guns and speed at the cost of protection; that Italian ships will have speed, moderate main batteries and unusual air craft equipment; that French ships also emphasize speed rather than protection and that American designs count heavily on protection.

This last assertion seems to be borne out by dispatches from Berlin. A heavy rain yesterday morning chilled the ardor of the young Communists, most of them less than 20 years of age, who are believed to be chiefly responsible for the riots.

A list of the victims, published in Bratislava (Presburg) in Czechoslovakia, identifies 80 dead, reports 400 wounded in hospitals and 360 others given first aid treatment. Many others were wounded who did not apply for medical aid.

The Mayor of Vienna has issued an appeal to the population to remain calm and aid in preserving order. Two thousand communal policemen have been engaged to help the regular police force maintain order and protect property during the emergency. The number of persons arrested during the rioting was 250.

Calling of Parliament in Session Is Topic of Parley—Latest Estimate Puts Dead at 70.

By the Associated Press.
VIENNA, July 18.—The strike in the communications services has been settled. Railroad, telegraph, telephone and postal services will be resumed at midnight.

Order has been restored throughout all Vienna.

The latest estimate of the casualties places them at 70 dead and about 300 wounded.

It seems certain that priceless documents were destroyed with the burning of the Palace of Justice, on Saturday. Their loss may result in a flood of litigation for many years.

Emergency Session of Parliament to Be Summoned.

By the Associated Press.
VIENNA, July 18.—With the exception of an official labor bulletin Vienna was without newspapers yesterday.

As soon as the strike is terminated, it is stated, Chancellor Seipel will convene an emergency session of Parliament to discuss the political situation resulting from the recent riots. It is predicted he will issue writs of election in the hope of securing a strong anti-Socialist majority in a new Reichstag.

The Social Democrats demanded that Chancellor Seipel convene Parliament. The Chancellor instantly replied, "Certainly, Parliament can be convened whenever you wish." Whereupon the Social Democrats declared they were in the hurry.

The Chancellor is of the opinion that the reconstitution of the Cabinet, which he deems necessary, must not be dictated by mob rule, but reached after serene and unprejudiced negotiations.

The Government with the support of the police and troops is absolute master of the situation.

The central section of Vienna is quiet, though presenting the picture of a state of siege, with all public buildings guarded by troops and police and machine guns at points of vantage. The streets leading to the suburbs are closed and all automobiles are stopped and searched for weapons, which it is feared the Communists are being supplied from the outside.

"Crisis in Fair Way of Solution," Austrian Embassy Says.
By the Associated Press.
PARIS, July 18.—The crisis now is in a fair way of solution" is the latest information given out by the Austrian legation in Paris on the situation in Vienna, where the rioting, pillage and arson occurred Friday and Saturday.

A statement issued yesterday by the legation follows:
"The general strike at Vienna is ended. Street cars are again circulating and work will be restored normally Monday morning. The Government is taking special measures to put an end to the strike and that of the railroad, postal and telegraph employees which are still in force. The crisis is in a fair way of solution. The Government, the position of which is unshaken, retains all initiative, and no changes or additions have been made to the cabinet. Parliament will be convened as soon as the strike movement has completely disappeared. There were no new incidents Sunday and absolute calm prevails."

Most Rioters Under 20.
This last assertion seems to be borne out by dispatches from Berlin. A heavy rain yesterday morning chilled the ardor of the young Communists, most of them less than 20 years of age, who are believed to be chiefly responsible for the riots.

A list of the victims, published in Bratislava (Presburg) in Czechoslovakia, identifies 80 dead, reports 400 wounded in hospitals and 360 others given first aid treatment. Many others were wounded who did not apply for medical aid.

The Mayor of Vienna has issued an appeal to the population to remain calm and aid in preserving order. Two thousand communal policemen have been engaged to help the regular police force maintain order and protect property during the emergency. The number of persons arrested during the rioting was 250.

Street cars began operating yesterday morning and taxicabs appeared on the streets. The day was sultry, so the populace thronged to the city's breathing places.

The reopening of the cafes and restaurants has had a distinctly quieting effect on the population, which takes kindly to the special police consisting of regulars and Republican guards. Thousands of sightseers made pilgrimages to the section where the rioting took place to view the destruction wrought especially at the Palace of Justice.

The interior is a mass of burned records and smashed furniture. The riotous rennaissance gates were destroyed.

Leaders Confer.
Burgomaster Seitz, leader of the Social Democrats, and Bauer, a Socialist leader, at a conference with Chancellor Seipel, emphasized the desirability of reaching a settlement on the outstanding issues before Wednesday, as the burial of the riot victims on that day might be the occasion for a fresh outbreak. They urged a quick settlement to prevent neighboring countries from using the disorders as a pretext for intervention.

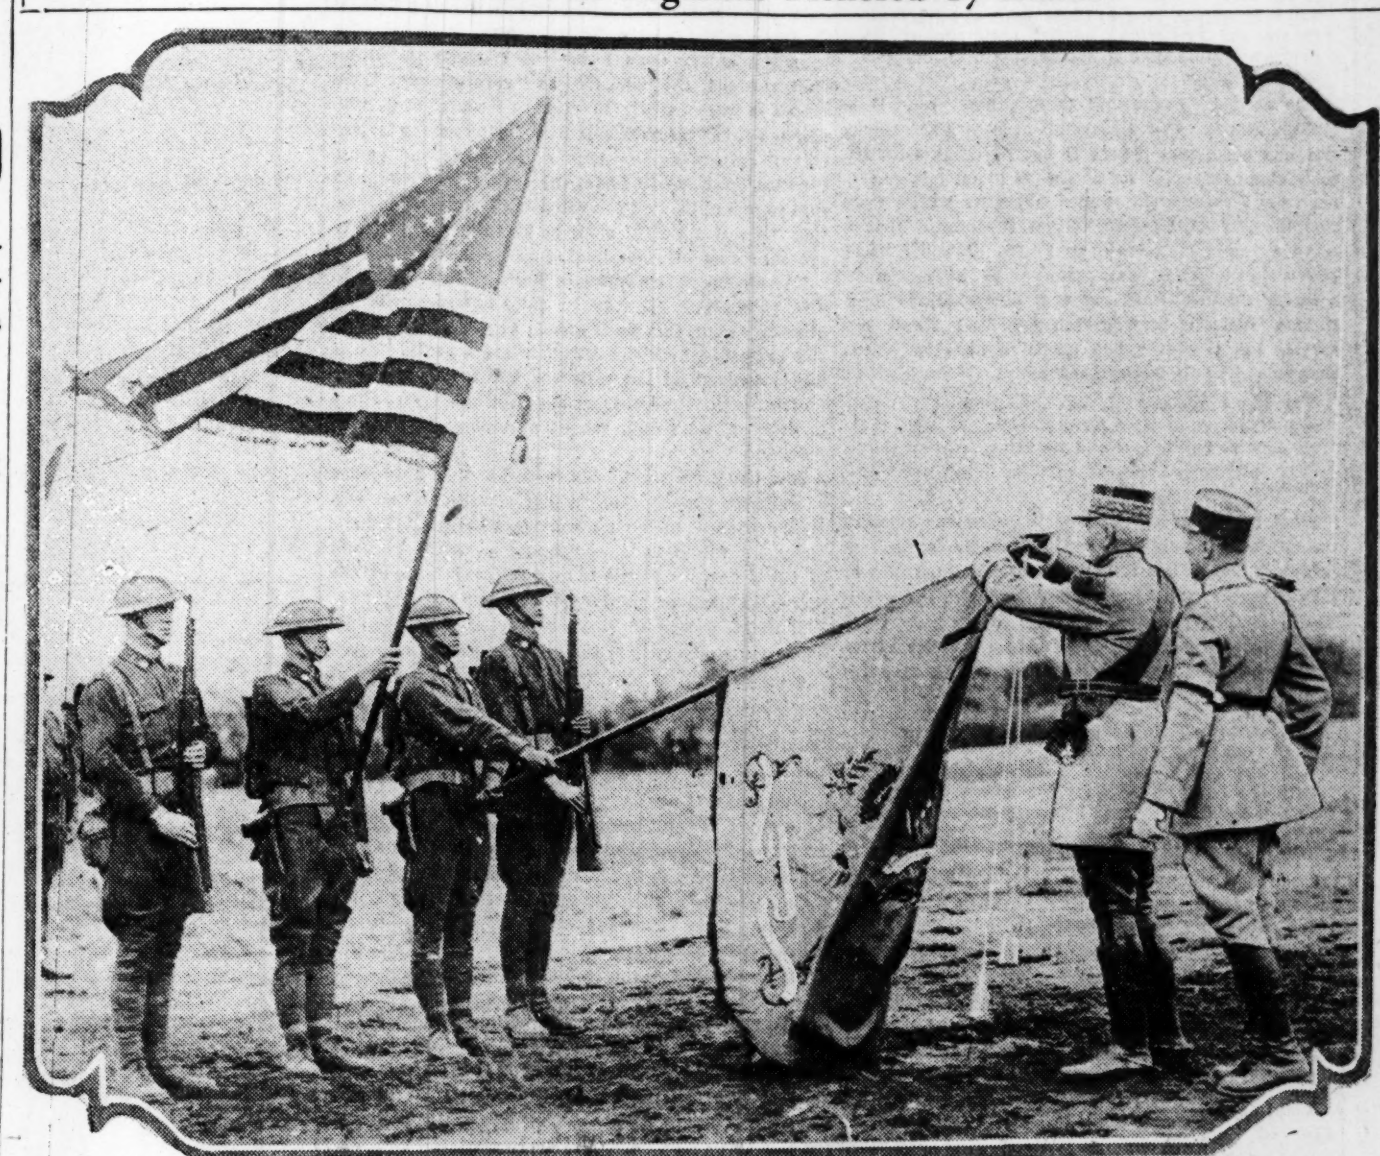

The 24-hour strike seems to have ended, but the general strike of Government employees continues.

In Fear of Fascism.
Socialist leaders say their efforts are designed to prevent civil war and to keep the Communists from bringing on a revolution. In a manifesto, the Socialist trade union's call upon the workers not to be misled by the Communists, "as their program of arming the workers would result immediately in the rioting, pillage and arson and terrible sacrifices in blood, terrible economic catastrophe, accompanied by famine and increase of unemployment, and place workers at the mercy of the forces, where Socialism is weak, at the mercy of armed Fascism, the most serious danger to the constitution of the republic."

Foreigners in Vienna are protected with all the power of the police. The leading hotels are under sufficient guard to prevent any attack in case of a recurrence of the outbreaks, which up to now have not taken an antiforeign turn.

A report from Innsbruck says that through trains between Italy and Germany in both directions have been permitted to cross Austrian territory unhindered.

Famous American Regiment Honored by France

ON behalf of the French Government, Gen. Fenelon F. G. Passaga reviewed the troops of the 26th Division at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., and bestowed the Croix de Guerre, as pictured on the colors of the 104th Infantry for heroism at Apremont in the World War.

COOLIDGES GOOD FOLKS,

President and Wife Pass Critical Eye of Neighbors in the Black Hills.

By the Associated Press.
RAPID CITY, S. D., July 18.—President and Mrs. Coolidge are considered "good folks" by their neighbors in the Black Hills who have cast a critical eye on the summer White House since its distinguished occupants came here almost five weeks ago.

Gradually, the President and his wife have come to get acquainted with the few prominent residents near the State Game Lodge. An occasional motion picture show in their residence has served as an opportunity to have in some of the neighbors.

Up at the corner store, about a mile from the lodge, Steve Hurley, the manager, has framed a dollar bill which he received from Mrs. Coolidge when she called recently to make some purchases.

"Presented by Mrs. Coolidge July 1927," is scrawled on the bill in ink from Hurley's pen.

"Yes, sir, she is all right," Hurley tells callers at his store, repeating how Mrs. Coolidge always has a wave of the hand or a word when she passes by or stops to make some purchases.

"We felt just at home," remarked Mrs. Cecil Gideon, wife of the President's guide, who also has charge of a large new dining room near the lodge.

Mr. Coolidge is familiarly referred to as "Cal" by the people of this section.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge are enjoying their stay here so well they are making no plans for the return trip to Washington. It is thought by some that the President might go to his old home at Plymouth, Vt., before returning to the capital.

Pan-American Federation Makes Public Alleged Moscow Note.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A document purporting to be a communist circular issued in Moscow, and which urged the rupture of the Pan-American Federation of Labor was made public here today by the federation coincident with the opening of that organization's convention.

The document, the federation said, was a translation from "Paris, of Havana. It was dated 'Moscow, April, 1927,' and signed by the president of the communist international. It opposed a boycott of the convention. Consequently, 'should be the rupture of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, denounced as an organ of penetration of the Yanqui imperialism and the formation of the fascist organizations of Latin America against the Yanqui imperialism and its exploitation.'"

CHAMBERLIN SKETCHES NEW
TRANS-ATLANTIC AIRPLANE

Full Automatic Control Will Simplify Navigation He Thinks—Hopes to Have Passenger Machine Ready in a Year.

By the Associated Press.
S. S. LEVIATHAN, July 18.—Charles D. Chamberlin said today he intended to devote his time to the development of trans-Atlantic flying.

"The next trans-Atlantic flight," he said, "must demonstrate the practicability of carrying a payload across, either of mail or passengers, or both, and not merely gasoline. Such a plane can be perfected. It all depends upon how soon money will be available.

"Foreign manufacturers are specializing on commercial types of planes; these are very good, though not equal to the Bellanca in efficiency. I was particularly interested in the high-powered engines they have developed. I hope by next year to have a new type of plane suitable for carrying passengers. This, of course, would not be a regular United States to Europe service, but a forerunner of such a service.

"Full automatic control will be the big feature of the new flying machine if the experiments with the Sperry gyro-compass, which have been under way for the last four years, result in making the equipment light enough for aircraft. With a suitable type of plane a trans-Atlantic flight with these instruments would not be particularly hazardous. Commercial flying over the Atlantic is possible now so far as engines are concerned.

"Instruments similar to those which ships are navigated at sea are needed in aviation. With automatic controls the pilot could let his plane fly itself while he made observations and checked progress, and navigate more accurately over a longer distance than is possible by the present methods of flying. The weight of such equipment—less than 100 pounds—would be more than compensated for by the elimination of one man from the crew."

Refuse to Permit Firing of Volley at Grave—Count Markievicz Resents Red Flag.

By the Associated Press.
DUBLIN, July 18.—The burial of the Countess Markievicz who wrote her name large in Irish history as a militant Republican, was carried out this morning at Glasnevin Cemetery. There was no Republican firing squad, however, for a farewell volley over the body of their comrade who herself had fought in their ranks.

A body of Free State soldiers attended to prevent the firing of a volley, and the police and military remained until everybody had left. The uniform which the Countess wore in the 1916 rebellion was buried with her. Buglers sounded the last post as the grave closed.

When the funeral cortege arrived at Cemetery yesterday, the Republican leaders in charge of the ceremonies learned that a hundred fully armed Free State soldiers and a squad of detectives were in possession of the Republican plot and forthwith placed the coffin in a vault.

Count Markievicz was indignant that the Republicans had permitted James Larkin, the fiery strike leader, to march in the procession with a large red flag presented to him by the Bolsheviks in Moscow.

Before the procession got under way there were touching scenes at the rotunda as thousands passed the bier of the countess, for not only had she been a prominent

Baltimore Provides $1,500,000 for Its Port, While Buffalo Has Expended $727,255 for Equipment.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—There are 864 operating airports and airplane landing fields in the United States today, W. P. McCracken, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, found after a special survey of airway facilities. Due to the current interest in air transport, he predicted that by the end of 1927 there would be 1000 such establishments serving flyers.

"During the past year more than 50 new airports have been established," McCracken said, today, "and twice that number of cities have set aside funds or have begun plans for modern airports. By the end of 1927 airports and landing fields will dot the United States, from coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico."

The aeronautical census takers in the survey include only ports and landing fields which are provided with lights, hangars, runways and other equipment for servicing planes. There are in addition more than 3000 unequipped landing fields marked on the department's maps where machines can come down or ascend in emergencies.

Modern Airports Costly.
The modern airport is an expensive and highly designed affair. In Buffalo, for instance, a recently completed municipal port cost $727,255 for its 413 acres of ground and equipment. Baltimore is going even a step farther, and has provided $1,500,000 for its port. Chicago, one of the early major centers to get into the field by reason of its central position on the trans-continental airway has a field which runways radiate out in eight different directions.

On the Pacific Coast, San Francisco, Portland and Oakland have terminals under construction, while New Orleans, Cleveland, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Tulsa got special mention in the survey return.

Five Government Airways.
Beacon lights to guide planes at night, which flood lights to make their landings safe, machine shops to take over their repair, and supply stations to refuel them are among the fittings at every modern airport. On the airways connecting ports, the Commerce Department itself is taking up the responsibility for lighting and marking the channels of movement, and has five airways fully established and seven under contract. The intermediate landing fields, too, the Government undertakes to provide, but they are smaller establishments than the regular airport, which is generally provided by the municipality through which the airway passes.

Of the 864 landing fields listed today, 207 are municipally provided, while 163 are commercial or private ports, and 124 are Commerce Department intermediate landing fields, on which planes can alight when their regular journeys are broken by engine failure, or called off by storm warning. There are 11 landing fields maintained by the army and navy, and a miscellaneous collection of testing and manufacturing grounds.

EMPLOYMENT, U. S. REPORTS
Seasonal Decrease in Leading Industries and Building Given as Cause.
By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—June employment of workers in the United States was slightly less satisfactory than during preceding months, the United States Employment Service reports. Declines in several leading industries and a slowing up in building were among the factors bringing about the condition, it was reported.

The demand for agricultural labor showed its usual seasonal increase during the month, but except in very few localities, there was a supply at least sufficient to meet the requirements.

"An analysis of the reports indicates that most of the industrial decrease was due to seasonal conditions," the report said. "At this time of year many factories either close their doors or greatly curtail their working forces for the summer months."

New Postoffice and Air Mail Station.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE plan of building the proposed new Postoffice for St. Louis on the block occupied by the Southern Hotel and in connection with it the Lindbergh Air Mail Station has already created interest outside of the city, and capitalists look with favor upon the proposed enterprise. The U. S. Lindbergh Air Mail Station should provide accommodation for any sort or size of planes, to be ready for passenger business, convenient to the central business and downtown hotels of St. Louis. Such an enterprise immediately started and pushed to completion will bring millions of outside money to be invested in St. Louis.

While St. Louis already has fields for the landing of planes and can still provide for new fields, even using landing places in some of the parks, a downtown air mail station connected with the new proposed Postoffice and the Mississippi River, is a prime necessity. Wake up, St. Louisans, and let the world know the strength, the power and beauty of your city.

The Delmar-Clara Crossings.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR commendable editorial on dangerous West End crossings leads me to express the hope that some time in the near future one of your traffic investigators may bestow just a peep at the extremely dangerous crossings at Delmar boulevard and Clara avenue. The speed with which automobiles rush four ways at the same time, with no traffic light or policeman to hold them in check, is appalling. Residents of the vicinity have begun to designate Clara avenue, from Delmar to Cabanne, as "Death Valley" because of the more-than-daily collisions at street intersections along Clara avenue. With a traffic signal at Clara and Delmar, maybe the drivers wouldn't have such a "head start" on pedestrians. What influence has for years prevented a "Stop-and-Go" sign at Clara and Delmar, I inquire.

PHILIP THOMAS.

A Sudden Burst of Zeal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE looked in vain in the various dramatic columns for any mention of the most pretentious show staged in St. Louis—a show, sir, that for the size of the stage, the number of people in the cast, the scenic effects and the pure, unadorned noise made in the effort to produce the opera has the Follies or the Ballet Moderne looking like a dumb show. I refer, sir, to the work now being done by the United Railways Co. on Washington avenue and Olive street.

The setting is perfect. Sweet are the eyes of publicity, so sweet that I strongly suspect the Department of Public Relations, not the Department of Maintenance, conceived the work being done on Washington avenue and Olive street. The Pace, Park and Compton cars were to be rerouted. Were they? They were not; the old rails were torn up and new ones laid, all before our eyes, say, "Two tokens, please." Market street being near the City Hall, perhaps, efficiency will move south next. Mr. Barnum, premier showman, meet Mr. Newman. And now we have that franchise—

A Triumvirate of Ability.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MAX thanks for your kindly editorial "Slater Is Himself Again," which aroused a responsive chord in my heart as I read and re-read your well-deserving tribute of admiration to that moral, clean-living, upstanding and outstanding gentlemanly ballplayer, George Slater, whose name and fame have brought prestige to St. Louis.

In penning these few words of appreciation, I feel that I am expressing the true and high regard of the legions of admiring fans and friends of this champion of champions who appreciate your kindly wishes and scholarly tribute of worth.

Three cheers for our triumvirate of publicity and ability, the "Michigan" val, the "Fordham Flash" and "Lucky Lindy," morally clean, physically fit, a credit to St. Louis, an honor to their vocation and a fitting example for all young Americans.

THOS. J. CURRAN.

A U. R. Absurdity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BEFORE the United Railways is granted its juicy new franchise, would it not be advisable to force this utility to abolish some of the absurdities which now make its use anything but convenient?

Take one particularly inconvenient and senseless procedure, namely, the custom of forcing persons to enter eastbound Manchester avenue cars by the front door and westbound cars on the same street by the rear one. Is there any intelligent reason for this? I have never been unable to find a conductor who can give one. Surely it is hard to imagine a reason for such procedure which would justify the inconvenience involved.

A HOLLOW DEFENSE.

The Post-Dispatch has been unable to get anyone supporting the service at cost-ordinance definitely to say how the city would benefit from such a contract with the street railways system, but the Globe-Democrat has been kind enough to assume this task. It says:

The ordinance would put the enterprise upon a better financial and operative basis, and enable the company at once to enter upon the improvements and extensions needed with greater assurance—would give it a more definite and permanent status.

The company can do all these things now. It is making money. It can make all necessary extensions and improvements. There is not the slightest difficulty about financing its needs. Is it not just emerging from a receivership under which its affairs were completely rehabilitated? Could it be said that a company which shows a profit of more than $5,000,000 in eight years needs to be put upon a better financial basis, or that one which is functioning perfectly and giving the best street car service the city ever had needs to have its status changed? The Globe-Democrat adds:

It would benefit the city government in the establishment of its relations in accord with the changes of public law and its interpretation that have developed since the original franchise was created.

What relations? How could the relations between the city and the company existing under the present franchise, which has 12 years to run, be improved by a new 30-year franchise? What change in the public law or its interpretation has developed under which these relations would be improved for the city by the new franchise? We are unable to read any meaning into such an assurance. Also:

It would doubtless save to the city the accumulated dues from the mill tax, which it will probably lose in large part if no agreement is made with the new company for the assumption by it of this debt.

The payment of approximately $500,000 a year to the city on the mill tax debt, which the reorganizers offer as a bait, would mean an addition of about 14 per cent of the annual municipal revenue of $40,000,000, and that for only seven years. Will the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen, for so small a consideration, sell the city "down the river" to Jake Newman of New Orleans? Again:

The city still has a number of important powers over regulations that do not affect rates.

What are they? There is not one left that is of the slightest importance. The courts have held that every regulatory power meaning anything has been handed over by the law to the Public Service Commission. It is the sheerest sophistry to say that under the ordinance any essential power to regulate either the fares or the service can be reposed in the city. However, there is a way in which the city can acquire satisfactory service at reasonable rates. It is by refusing to grant a new 30-year franchise, permitting the railways to exhaust the remaining twelve years of their old franchises, and then allowing them to operate on permits. This is the way Detroit is handling her utilities. The franchise is an anachronism. The only benefit it secured to the city, that is the fixing of rates, has been swept away by recent court decisions. Why should St. Louis go backward when it can go forward? Says the Globe-Democrat:

But the main thing, in our judgment, is to take this matter out of the field of continuous altercation and get our street railway system settled upon such a basis that it can be at once developed to meet the needs of the city and maintained there.

There is no "altercation." The traders are demanding a franchise to consolidate their speculative profits. They want the city to ignore the twelve years which the street railway franchises still have to run and grant them a new franchise for thirty years, in order that Newman and his associates may immediately take a few million dollars out of the deal. Because the Post-Dispatch and others, having in mind the popular interest as opposed to that of speculators, do not want the city to do this, can there be said to be an "altercation"? If so, it is nothing to the one we will have on our hands if the franchise is granted and we subsequently attempt to articulate surface and subway transportation. This last is in itself a sufficient reason for keeping our selves free and permitting the present franchises of the street railways to run out. We must think of what a mess we will be in then if we tie ourselves up now.

We are grateful to the Globe-Democrat for having essayed the role of spokesman for the ordinance, something that up to this time none of its sponsors or supporters has done. Its specific statement sufficiently reveals the weakness of the cause. It is a bad cause, and one that does not bear analysis. If there is a better case for it, the Post-Dispatch would like to hear it.

TAXING CIGARETTES.

We suppose the hard-pressed manufacturers of cigars, pipes, pipe and chewing tobaccos are hailing the imposition of that cigarette tax by Kansas City as the promise of better days. For if the fiscal history of taxation tells us anything it tells us that the imposition of a heavy tax upon something has always led the users of that thing to hunt for substitutes.

If anybody doubts this, all he need do is recall the words which Jefferson wrote, in a letter to M. de Neuville, regarding the result of a tax on wine:

I rejoice, as a moralist, at the prospect of a reduction of the duties on wine, by our national legislature. It is an error to view a tax on that liquor as merely a tax on the rich. It is a prohibition of its use to the middle class of our citizens, and a condemnation of them to the poison of whiskey.

We always hate to point to a fly in a pleasing ointment, but we cannot avoid saying that there is a reason why history may not, in this case, repeat itself. Were the American of today exactly like the American of Jefferson's time, he would probably react in the same way, and there would be a great increase in the smoking of cigars and pipes, and perhaps we should see even the members of the august United States Supreme Court—once more indulging in the charming habit of chewing the leaf.

But the American of today, alas, is not what he was when the sage of Monticello penned that missive to his French friend. And in no way does he differ more radically than in his attitude toward laws which try to alter his habits. Under the dry millennium, he has learned how to get things which the law tells him he may not have. He has learned that there is such a thing as bootlegging. And if he can bootleg liquor, why may he not do the same with cigarettes?

A RAILROAD SPOKESMAN SPEAKS.

The majority opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission in the St. Louis and O'Fallon railroad rate case was severely criticized last week by Samuel O. Dunn, editor of the Railway Age. Addressing a luncheon of the Ohio Society in Chicago Mr. Dunn characterized the decision as "revolutionary," declared it was contrary to existing Federal laws, condemned it as "incompatible with the permanently successful private management of railroads and public utilities," and insisted that the courts have held, and that even the La Follette valuation law contemplates, that "effective weight shall be given in valuation to present costs of reproduction of property."

The ability of the editor of Railway Age is nationally recognized. It may be said, however, without disparagement, that he is not an impartial witness in any issue to which the railroads are a party. He is the spokesman of the railroads and in the fragmentary quotations taken from his Chicago address there is evident, we think, the adroitness of the special pleader.

And that's all right. But with his vast knowledge of railroad history and "resent conditions and current economic facts" we wonder what Mr. Dunn's judgment would be as a referee, as to the capacity of the American people to pay railroad rates on the valuation basis of "reproduction new."

If there is one economic verity in this rate-and-valuation problem it is that the people are now paying all the traffic will bear. Railroad rates are at their practical peak. If the railroads cannot prosper under the present scale of compensation, then we must get ready to face the grim inevitability that their successful operation as a private industry is impossible. But let us not charge this to the majority opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, or to economic authorities like Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court, or to practical men like the members of the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission. Let us charge it to the economic realities—to the patent truth that the people are now paying the ultimate limit for transportation service.

The successful Hawaiian flight is a Honolulu-Lulu.

THAT ARMORE FAUX PAS.

That was no way at all to behave at a picnic, especially at a picnic of farmers at which the President of the United States was a guest.

We refer to the gauche of Gov. Bulow, the Democratic Governor of South Dakota, in tossing the tariff into the merry matinee at Ardmore. "If you will just quit fixing artificial prices for the things the farmer has to buy," he remarked, "we'll get along all right." Naturally, the revelry passed. The gayety stopped dead in its tracks. Silence, constraint, furtive glances at the guest of honor. And then Senator Norbeck, a Republican who has lately returned to the folds of orthodoxy, made a tact situation tauter by proffering an apologetic defense of the tariff. Our country is so big, said Mr. Norbeck, that occasionally one section does not understand the problems of another, and it occasionally happens that what is velvet for the people over yonder is faded calico for the folks back here. Sounds as if Norbeck were stealing Henry Ford's stuff, doesn't it? Well, anyhow, think of a Republican in good standing attempting an alibi for the tariff, that legendary deity of plenty which has bestowed its abundance impartially upon furrow and factory, peasant and patrician, stubborn glee and artful Wall Street.

Yes, this is a big country. The distance from the maple groves of Vermont to the wheatlands of South Dakota is terrifying. It has got the tariff limping and winded. But wasn't it a faux pas to thrust this truth into the face of Mr. Coolidge at a rural merry-making? It was. And isn't a faux pas a terrible thing? It is.

The new dry chief plans to make prohibition pay as it goes if ever it gets going.

POOH-BAH AND OUR BUREAUCRACY.

We trust the thousands who will witness the amusing coverings of Pooh-Bah, in the Mikado, which starts this evening at the Municipal Theater, will not overlook the fact that this inimitable character has a very serious application for Americans just at this time.

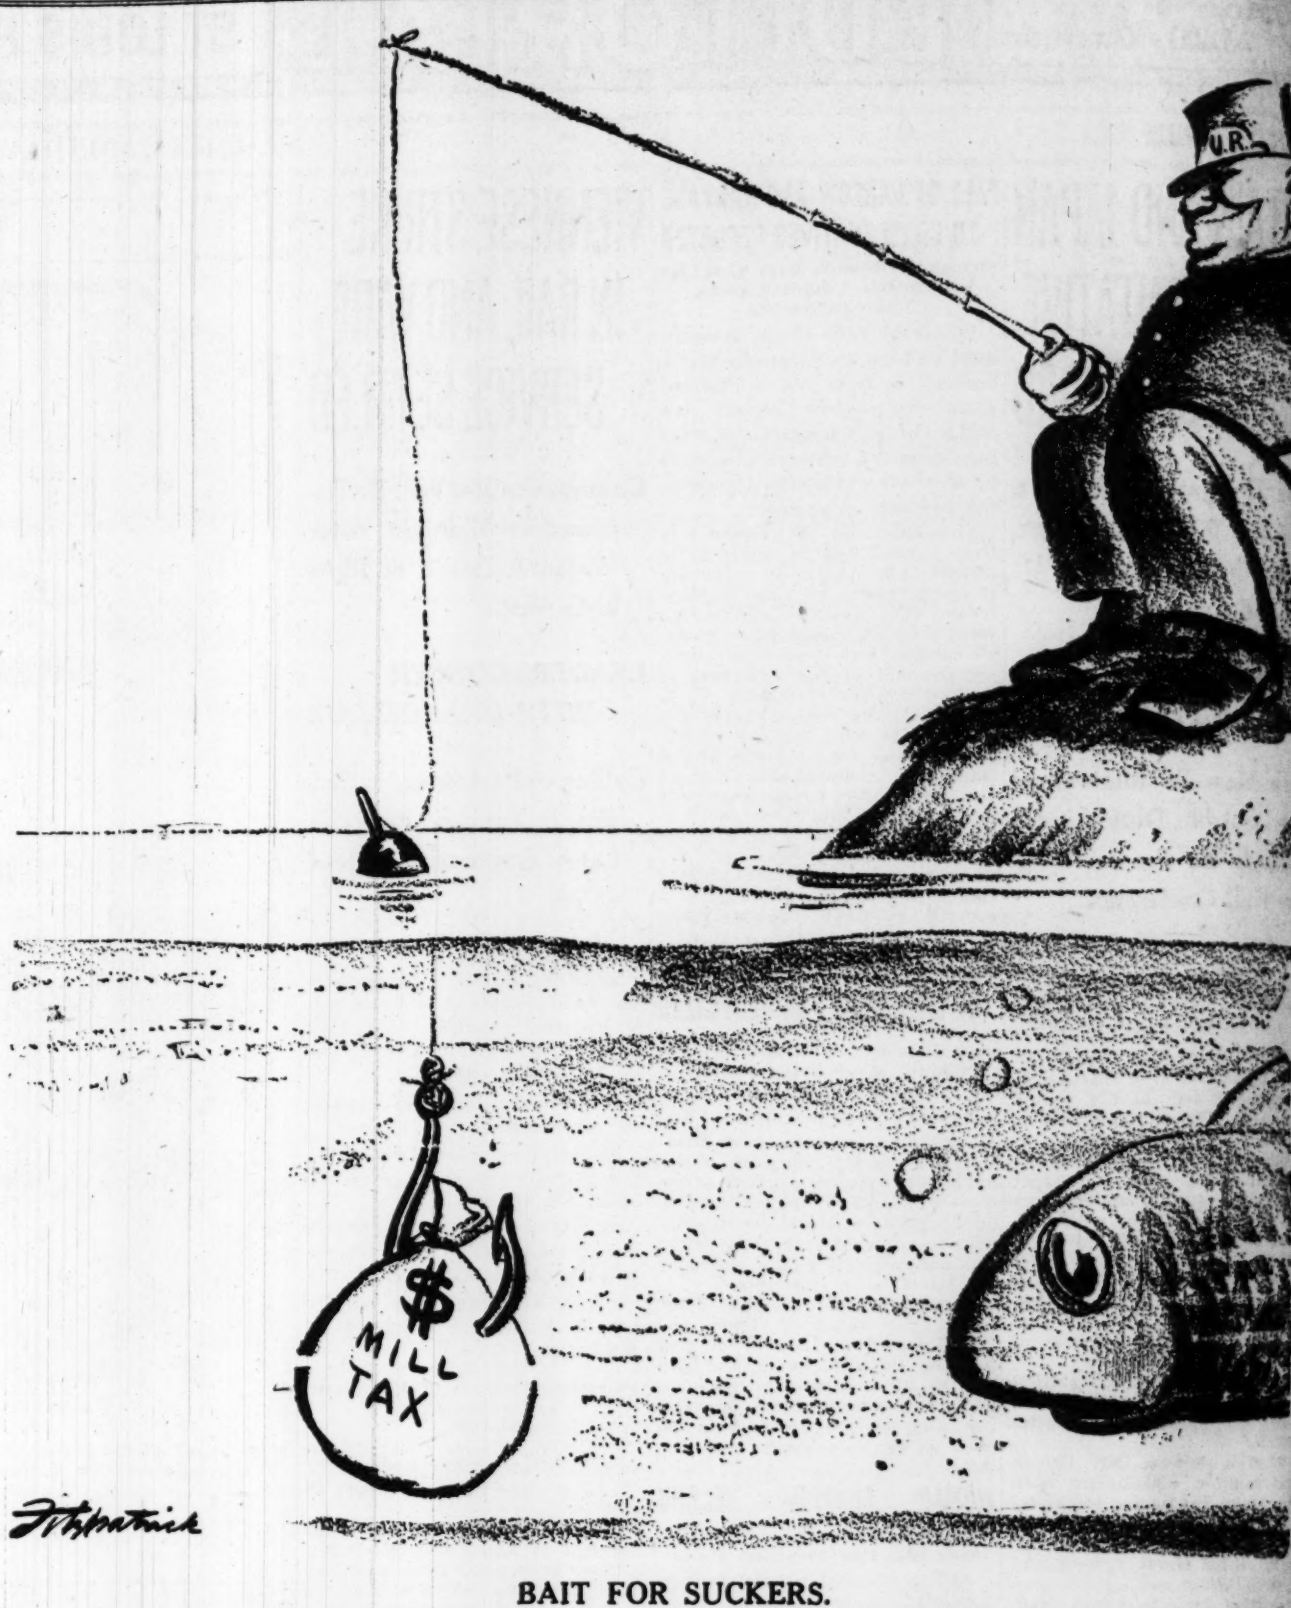

Pooh-Bah, in fact, may serve as a personification of the growing Federal bureaucracy which is gradually absorbing more and more of the functions and rights which Americans have traditionally considered prerogatives of the free citizen. He is, as Gilbert calls him, Lord High Everything Else, or as Pooh calls himself, "First Lord of the Treasury, Lord Chief Justice, Commander-in-Chief, Lord High Admiral, Master of the Buckhounds, Groom of the Back Stairs, Archbishop of Titipiti, Lord Mayor, both acting and elect, all rolled into one."

Our bureaucracy, in trying to do everything for everybody, has lately been falling all over its feet. The Shipping Board, for instance, has recently got into a number of alterations with other branches over jurisdiction. The Treasury Department, too, has got into a terrible tangle by promising, through its Bureau of Internal Revenue, that bootleggers who file income tax returns will not be prosecuted for law violation, and then trying, through its prohibition enforcement service, to get them convicted. Pooh-Bah was in much the same sort of fix, as witness his own words:

Of course, as First Lord of the Treasury I could propose a special vote that would cover all expenses, if it were not that, as leader of the opposition, it would be my duty to resist it. I, too, and I, too, as Postmaster-General, I could so cook the accounts, that as Lord High Auditor I should never discover the fraud. But then, as Archbishop of Titipiti, it would be my duty to denounce my dishonesty and give myself into my own custody as First Commissioner of Police.

So, while it would not do to take Pooh-Bah too seriously, the spectators who enjoy him during this week might well remember that he can just now mean more to them than a mere buffoon, that he has assumed a more or less profound political significance.

Nothing is perfect in this imperfect world. For example, the papers that told about the string of trout Mr. Coolidge caught with flies also reported Frank Lowden's speech at Madison.

SUBSTITUTE FOR THE MARINE CORPS.

CHESTER T. CROWELL in the Saturday Evening Post.

THE United States now offers the largest reservoir of capital on earth, and some parts of Latin America are ready to match it with more capital than they have ever had before in all their history. The stage is set for rapid development if those who favor it have their way. Or, on the other hand, it is entirely possible to build up such a solid opposition to co-operation with American capital that the whole course of international relations in this hemisphere would eventually change.

Recently I discussed this situation with the chief executive of an American corporation which has invested $15,000,000 in a South American country with a view to spending three or four times that much on future development.

"We're not doing anything now," he said. "Conditions are not right. There is a feeling of suspicion, a vague sort of unfriendliness. We can wait, so we are waiting. Some way ought to be found to make the attitude of our Government clearer by the Democratic nomination is concerned. The reference to the days of McAdoo would seem to indicate that the one-time Secretary of the Treasury is no longer in the land of the living. Clay, Calhoun, Webster, Stanton, Chase, Blaine, Reed and Bryan are dead and McAdoo is bracketed with them."

The unconscious humorist of the Post may not be wide of the mark as far as McAdoo's part in the coming contest for the Democratic nomination is concerned. It is not believed that McAdoo can get the delegation from his own State. Failing to do that he cannot afford to have his name presented to the convention. Even as a man around whom the drys can rally he does not look like a good bet. It may, after all, be appropriate to refer to the days of McAdoo. His sun has set. His day was in 1924.

THE LITTLE REFORM CLUB.

When a great, but needless, nuisance is upon us, it is idle to seek to combat it. We are to launch a campaign against dinners in the midst of the dinner season, our Americanism would be suspected, our belief in the Darwinian theory would be investigated, and some one would dare us to come to Alabama and use such language. But the blisful interim of July and August, when people are inclined to reflect on the reason, if any, for their post-vacation activities, startling innovations are received calmly. Strike while the iron is hot, the collar is wilted and people are too indolent to strike back. We do not oppose dinners. We look with a tolerant eye upon after-dinner speakers, even those who begin with, "It seems there were a couple of Irishmen" those who tell the story of the couple who were married in the back yard so the old shoes would shoe the chickens and those who try to talk in dialect. But why must something "remind" these pests? And why must they be stepped if we have heard their anti-diluvian story? We favor the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, in puerile post-prandial perambulations. "This does not remind me; if it did, I would suffer from the same lack of association of ideas that characterizes Gertrude Stein; but it is my story and I am going to tell it." Such an introduction would add to the novelty of after-dinner speeches; it might even eliminate the story of the two Irishmen.

The consensus of opinion on the forthcoming Dempsey-Sharkey fight seems to be that the seat sale will be large.

Getting Off the Island

ISLANDERS. By Helen Hull. (Macmillan.)
L island, as it was for the women of her world and generation; an island where from which it was very hard to escape. Yes, it was some time ago that Helen Dacey lived—before women learned to swim.

Helen, having something inside of her that was different from most women of her time had for Matthew, to whom she had shut up on the island. It held her captive but she never was conquered, and other women were, for she though she felt herself as for any man, there was no escape from the restraint that men imposed. The women of her world, in her generation, did not know that they were captives of their own making, and the women of the second generation she found at last one worthy of the spirit and her freedom-craving spirit, and bestowed it. If, now, the women are pretty well off the island where the men used to keep them, they owe a good deal to the Helen Daceys who have gone before.

Ellen Dacey was left, stranded on the homestead island when the Dacey men rode away in the 4th to them rode the romance out of her life, then rode to whom she had given her promise, to her came back. If he had returned it might have been different. Maternity might have made Ellen a mother with her island. Instead she became the family burden-bearer, doing a man's part under a woman's limitations.

All about her were other women, captives, too, but not knowing it, too feeble to have fought for freedom if they had felt the lack of it: Helen's mother, Martha; her brother's sister, Mary; her nephew's wife, Alice, who had lived all her life near the water and had never thought of swimming.

Then came Anne, daughter of the nephew who had had the affection which "An Telly" might have given a son of her own, and in her Ellen Dacey centered the hope and found the promise that, until then, she had not found among the islanders. To Anne, who felt the island's fetters and was fearful under them but uncertain of the way of escape, Aunt Ellen gave her benediction.

"I want you to get off the island, Anne. Ever since I thought about it's being an island women get stuck on all their lives. I said, 'Anne must get off.' And I want to live to see you. It's been as good as getting off myself, thinking about you. I couldn't get poor Alice never could, but it's different now."

It is different now. The women

LUTHERAN SOCIETY OPENS CONVENTION

Business Sessions of Walther League Convoked at Washington U. Field House.

A suggestion that modern inventions such as radio and movies be put to use in the India missionary fields was made by E. J. Gallmeyer of Fort Wayne, Ind., chairman of the executive board, at the annual convention of the Walther League at Washington University Field House today.

The Walther League is an organization of 50,000 young persons to promote conservative, fundamentalist Lutheran Christianity. Today's business sessions were attended by 350 persons, including about 750 delegates.

A. A. Grossman, assistant manager of Concordia Publishing House and president of the league for seven years, delivered the presidential address. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Mayor Miller and Election Commissioner George Elgel, representing Gov. Baker. H. T. Kuene of Baltimore, Md., responded.

The afternoon session was set aside to secretary's and treasurer's reports and an address by the Rev. H. B. Hammett of Rochester, N. Y., followed by a tour of churches, schools and like attractions. A ballot was presented for the annual election, to be held at noon tomorrow.

Music at the opening services yesterday was led by a Walther League band and a convention chorus of 500 voices. Several thousand attended and joined in singing, "Seek That Ye May Excel," written on the convention motto by the Rev. Prof. P. E. Kretzmann of Concordia Theological Seminary. Prof. Kretzmann gave the principal address, also based on the convention motto. He quoted a statement to the effect that the fathers of Lutheranism were dead and the children "indifferent to the trust committed to them," and continued:

Hope in Young Members.
"But what is the answer to this depressing, to this disheartening prediction? The present assembly, an assembly consisting of Lutheran young people of the staunch old type, together with their friends, an assembly representing practically every state of the Union and the Dominion of Canada, an assembly including young men and young women from practically every station in life from every condition of economic well-being."

"Ours is the inestimable glory of spiritual blessings in a measure which has not had its equal since the time of the apostles. For the first time in the history of the world the great ideal has been reached: a free church in a free state! Ours is the wonderful blessing of the open Bible, of the Scriptures accessible to every person in his own tongue, with nothing added thereto and nothing taken therefrom."

"Ours is the privilege of teaching and of being taught of Christ, true God, begotten of the Father from eternity. Ours is the confession of the virgin birth; also true man, born of the Virgin Mary. Ours is the conscious belief in the perfect atonement of Christ, whereby a full redemption has been gained for all men. Ours is the certainty of the justification, by grace, for Christ's sake, through faith."

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Saratoga, N. Y., July 18.—A journey to Tom Luther's camp here today to see Dempsey's decision not to do any punishing work.

Dempsey's camp arrangements here are far better than during his stay at Saratoga. He has a private cottage here, and he has a few favored friends who have been given access to Dempsey's cottage, hidden away from prying eyes up in the hills.
